Corn Price Jumps on Forecast of Early Frost

Dakotas Touched Already With Half Of Crop Periled by Unseasonable Cold

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Bad weather again was threatening the Nation's already greatly damaged corn crop last night.

Yesterday the Weather Bureau predicted scattered frosts in eastern Iowa, Michigan and the northern sections of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, as well as the North Atlantic and New England States. Sunday night frosts were reported in the Dakotas and parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

A great deal of corn—perhaps half—is still subject to frost damage. If it should be caught, the country's supply of livestock and livestock products—meats, poultry, eggs and dairy products such as milk, butter, cheese, ice creams, etc., will be due for further reduction with accompanying higher prices.

The frost warning abruptly halted the downward movement of grain, and sent prices that had been dropping steadily for four sessions scurrying back up.

At the close at Chicago wheat was up from seven to nine cents; corn from one to almost five cents, and oats from one to three cents, with other commodities following along.

The average date for a killing frost in most of the Corn Belt is still more than two weeks off. Even if corn was as advanced as normally a frost now would be serious. But much of the crop is unusually late, due to flood-delayed planting.

An early frost would seem to be nature's final lethal crack at this year's harvest. An extraordinarily wet spring held back corn planting and cultivating for two to six weeks, and drowned out hundreds of thousands of acres. After the wet spring, the hottest, driest summer in years then took its toll, driving the estimated harvest down from 3200 million bushels last year to 2400 million.

Corn is the Nation's No. 1 crop. Although this year's wheat harvest is the greatest in all history, its yield of 1400 million bushels is only slightly more than half as much as even the greatly reduced corn crop will yield. Any reduction in corn is immediately reflected in virtually all farm prices.

Other weather damage news came out of the Department of Agriculture. Between five and seven million boxes of citrus fruit was reported destroyed in Florida by last week's hurricane, and probably more than 400,000 acres of vegetable crops.

The citrus damage would equal about 6 to 8 per cent of the Florida crop of oranges and grapefruit.

While grain was again going up, the decline that set in in meats, butter and eggs last week continued yesterday. Wholesale prices of meat were down in New York City and Chicago, the drop ranging from 50 cents to $1 a hundred pounds. However, livestock remained steady, indicating that dealers were watching the price movements in grain.

Top eggs in the New York wholesale market were 3 to 4 cents under Friday quotations, selling at 64 to 66 cents. In Chicago, eggs were off about 3 cents.

New York and Chicago wholesale butter prices also were down to 80 cents a pound, 2½ cents below Friday and 7 cents under a week ago.

Bunch Death Being Studied By U. S. Aides

The Justice Department yesterday said attorneys in its civil rights division have been studying the case of Forest J. Bunch, who died last month of a fractured skull six days after he was arrested for intoxication.

At the same time, United States Attorney George Morris Fay denied reports that his office has closed the case.

Bunch, a 64-year-old carpenter of 18 3d st. ne., died at Gallinger Hospital August 4. He was picked up in front of 1302 F st. ne., for intoxication shortly after midnight, police said, and later was taken to Gallinger Hospital after complaining of being ill.

First examinations said he was suffering from high blood pressure and he was returned to his cell at the Ninth Precinct station. At 7:15 p. m. the same day he again became ill and was returned to the hospital, where another examination disclosed a skull fracture. He died after an operation to remove a blood clot.

His death resulted from a fall after he had suffered a stroke, a coroner's jury later decided in terming it accidental death.

His family has charged he met with foul play while in police custody.

A Justice Department spokesman said attorneys in the civil rights section were studying the case, but that no agents had been assigned to it.

Refugee Train Stands By

New Storm Hits Florida Coast From Ft. Myers to Tampa Bay

By The Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Sept. 22 (AP).—A new tropical storm lunged at southern Florida from the Gulf of Mexico tonight, pelting flooded lowlands with fresh downpour and raising a potential hurricane menace for the Atlantic Seaboard.

Whirling out of the Gulf, the newest disturbance whipped the Florida coast between Fort Myers and Tampa Bay with winds up to 60 miles per hour.

Although there apparently was little danger at the moment, Grady Norton of the Federal Storm Warning Service said the gales might jump to hurricane force when the storm crosses Florida and enters the Atlantic.

The Weather Bureau said late today that the storm did not appear as far advanced as indicated earlier. Its forward movement had slowed from about 18 to 10 miles an hour, indicating, the bureau said, it might take a more northeasterly course.

The new blow caused considerable anxiety in the flooded areas of south Florida's farming districts.

A 100-car refugee train stood by at Fort Pierce to move residents inlands, should need arise.

Meanwhile, the Gulf Coast from northwest Florida to Louisiana tabulated incredible damage and counted at least two score dead. It appeared likely that the cost of last week's hurricane would exceed 75 million dollars in south Florida and on the Gulf Coast.

The hurricane-beaten Mississippi coast had an immediate health problem from mounds of dead fish and animals along the beaches.

Poisonous snakes, apparently washed in from the offshore islands, complicated the task of rehabilitation.

The American Red Cross announced it had set aside 1 million dollars for disaster relief in the hurricane areas.

Truman Orders Aid Sent to Gulf Area

President Truman yesterday directed the distribution of surplus personal property to hurricane stricken Louisiana and Mississippi in a letter to Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming.

He directed the War Assets Administration to transfer, without reimbursement under Public Law 233, Eighteith Congress, to the

Taft and Foes Launch Debate On High Prices

Tour Reported Helping Party Most as Few Jump on Bandwagon

By Robert G. Albright
Post Reporter

En Route to Seattle, Sept. 22.—Senator Robert A. Taft today opened a long-distance debate with Democratic leaders on what may be the No. 1 1948 campaign issue: "Who's to blame for high prices?"

Taft aimed another price shaft at the administration, and "welcomed debate on the subject" before leaving the high Sierras for the Pacific Northwest.

Replying to an attack by Democratic Senators Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Wyo.) and Scott W. Lucas (Ill.), the Ohio Republican claimed to have drawn first blood with his San Francisco speech pinning the blame on President Truman.

Lucas and O'Mahoney, in Washington had termed Taft's charges unfair and ascribed living cost rises to Republican policies.

The controversy entered the "you're another" stage as Taft came back with this:

"The democratic high command has been planning to blame the Republicans for high prices, and from the intemperate statement by Senators Lucas and O'Mahoney, issued thruogh the Democratic National Committee, they are very much upset, indeed, that anyone should point out the obvious truth."

He repeated charges that Mr. Truman lifted price controls too rapidly, and renewed his proposal to stabilize wages at 50 to 60 per cent above prewar levels.

"Do Messrs. Lucas and O'Mahoney desire to reestablish OPA?" he asked. "Suppose they state their solution for high prices instead of calling names."

Taft boarded a train for the Calif., after motoring from Lake Tahoe past Shasta Dam in California Governor Earl Warren's car. He will deliver another defense of the Taft-Hartley Act tomorrow night in Seattle.

After two weeks of steady plugging in California and Nevada, the undeclared candidate left behind him a feeling he had done his party more good than he had himself. In neither State were there any Taft delegates in the immediate picture.

There was no longer much doubt,

Unsolved D. C. Crimes Take Jump

New Statistics Show Big Drop In Cases Cleared

The Nation's Capital is taking a beating on its crime record.

In addition to the recent spectacular increase in crime in Washington, as reported by the FBI, the District is lagging far behind records of previous years on percentage of cases solved.

The percentage of cases solved by police during the first half of this year has decreased anywhere from a third to a half of the percentages reported for the same period of 1946.

Here is what happened to Washington's crime record from the first half of 1946 to the first half of 1947:

During the first six months of 1946, 82.6 per cent of robbery cases were cleared. During the same period this year, only 45.9 per cent of such cases were closed.

Assault Clearings Tumble

During the first six months of 1946, 97.6 per cent of assault cases were cleared. This year, the figure was only 36.8 per cent.

The number of burglary cases cleared during the first half of 1946 was 54.3 per cent. This year it was only 30.7 per cent.

The number of larceny cases rose—from 33.8 per cent closed during the first half of 1946 to 34.1 per cent for the same period this year.

The number of theft cases closed dropped from 16.2 per cent for the first half of 1946 to 6.9 per cent for the first half of 1947.

The number of auto thefts closed went down from 18.2 per cent to 14.4 per cent.

Murder Cases Cleared

Washington cleared 105.9 per cent of its murder cases during the period from January to June, 1946, and 111.1 per cent of such cases during the same period of this year.

The figures on which these statistics are based include all cases solved during the reporting period, although some cases had originated prior to the period covered by the report.

These statistics represent crime during a half year period, only they are startlingly different from the statistics reported last year by the Metropolitan Police Department.

Last year, Washington had a

Two More Health Centers, 60 Nurses Sought for D. C.

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

Money for two new city health centers and for 217 more employes was asked by the District Health Department yesterday in its estimate of budget needs for the 12 months starting next July 1.

The department's proposed administrative budget for the 1949 fiscal year totaled $2,817,829. This compares with $2,042,000 for this year. The new figure does not include proposed budgets for the city hospitals. Those are to be announced today.

One of the proposed health centers would be in the densely populated northwest central area of the city and the other would be in Anacostia.

For the northwest health center, the department asked $287,250. Prewar appropriations for the project total $134,750. Added to this would be $210,000 which the District expects to get in Federal hospital and health center building funds in the 1949 fiscal year.

For the Anacostia health center, $15,000 was asked for plans and specifications.

Most of the proposed spending increase in the department's operating budget would go for hiring additional personnel. One major request is for 60 more public health nurses. Such an increase is "one of the most important health needs in Washington at the present time," the department said.

The department now has 121

U. S. to State Food Plans This Week

President to Set Amount of Exports Abroad, Decide on Conservation Steps

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman will announce this week how the United States proposes to meet the world food crisis. His statement is expected to answer two questions:

1. How much food can the United States spare to combat hunger in Europe and Asia?

2. What steps are to be taken to conserve fod in the United States? Voluntary rationing—meatless days, for example,—may be one answer.

Mr. Truman's statement will come at a time when most food prices in the United States are skyrocketing, due to heavy eating at home, a short corn crop, and shipments of food abroad.

Eben Ayers, assistant press secretary at the White House, told reporters that Mr. Truman would issue the statement "in a few days." This was shortly after a Cabinet food committee had submitted a report to the President, accompanied by a series of verbal recommendations.

Sees Cabinet Officers

The Chief Executive, in a round of conferences with Cabinet officers, had wrestled throughout the day with problems that took on urgency during his trip to Rio de Janeiro.

First Mr. Truman conferred with Secretary of State Marshall. Presumably they talked about American stop-gap aid to avert hunger and chaos in Europe, thus heading off Communist gains this winter. Presumably, also, they talked about the question of a special session of Congress to authorize such aid.

Later on, at a White House luncheon, Mr. Truman met with all the members of his Cabinet who were in Washington. Two members were absent—Secretary of the Treasury Snyder and Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach.

The White House gave out no statement on what went on at the luncheon meeting.

Royall Sits In, Too

The Cabinet Food Committee called on President Truman late in the afternoon. It is made up of Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of Commerce Harriman, and Secretary of Agriculture Anderson. Yesterday, however, Secretary of the Army Royall also sat in, since his department is responsible for huge shipments of food to Germany and Japan.

Following the meeting with Mr. Truman, Secretary Anderson told reporters that the committee had submitted a report on the food situation at home and abroad, and had made some verbal recommendations. He said that the President would study the report and the recommendations and would have something to say in three or four days.

Secretary Anderson declined to reveal any of the recommendations, saying that any comment would have to come from the President.

Missing Soldier Found Alive After Philippines Crash

Manila, Sept. 22 (AP).—The United States Thirteenth Airforce announced tonight that the only passenger unaccounted for among 27 Army men who parachuted from a C-46 transport in a storm over northern Luzon Saturday had been found alive.

The passenger, a Corporal Meadows, was found several miles from Bontoc today.

One of the 27 men was killed in parachuting from the plane.

The jumpers returned to Clark Field, their home base, today to find their baggage and extra clothing awaiting them in perfect condition.

The pilotless plane, which flew 40 miles after the men took to parachutes, made a belly landing in a cane field, and came through comparatively undamaged.

Among the survivors was Staff Sergt. J. M. Carhart, 819 B st. se., Washington, D. C.

District's 12th Polio Case Listed

A 21-year-old Washington woman was listed by the Health Department yesterday as the District's twelfth polio victim this year.

The woman, a resident of the 3300 block of Dix st. ne., was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for treatment, health officials announced.

Besides the 12 cases in Washington, 16 have been listed from suburban communities, making a total of 28 for the Greater Washington area this year.

Soviet Policy Seen Leading To Disaster

Britain Warns United Nations Can Be Destroyed By Russian Tactics

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Flushing Meadows, N. W., Sept. 22.—Britain today bluntly warned Soviet Russia that its uncompromising insistence upon United Nations approval of Soviet policies could lead only to disaster.

Hector McNeil, British Minister of State, recounted for 72 minutes the futile attempts made by the five major powers to obtain decisions. The General Assembly was unusually attentive as he spoke, but six outbursts of applause showed the obvious popularity of his words.

"If the Soviet government considers that it can in all situations have its will prevail," said the youthful Scotsman, "or it considers that in all areas its powers must be extended, if it thinks that in describing any international situation its description must be accepted, then I say without qualification that not only will the United Nations as we know it be destroyed, but the unstable peace of the world will crumble and crash, bringing to us all the ranging hideous consequences to which Mr. Vishinsky drew our attention."

Sarcasm Draws Laughs

His rapier sarcasm of Andrei Vishinsky's "war mongering" speech drew giggles and belly-laughs from the dignified delegates. But most placed the greatest importance on his obvious effort to bridge the chasm between the Soviets and the West.

"Neither I nor any members of the government deny the legitimate aspirations of Russia," he said slowly and with emphasis. "Nor would we seek to cabin (confine) the extensions which it has legitimately sought and which a great nation, by the very nature of its growth, must have."

He made several other pointed pleas for Soviet cooperation, and especially toward finding a basis for the economic unity of Germany, which would contribute to the rehabilitation of Europe.

The November meeting of the council of foreign ministers, he said, "seems almost the last chance of securing any agreement on Europe."

Marshall Proposal Supported

He strongly supported Secretary Marshall's proposal for a permanent "little assembly" as a means of "crystallizing world opinion."

But, he asserted emphatically, "there must be no question of contravening the provisions of the charter or of depriving any of the organs of the United Nations of its proper function."

This was obviously aimed at the possibility that American proposals for limiting the use of the veto might entail revision of the United Nations Charter.

Political disappointment with the United Nations "has primarily grown from the slow paralysis which the world has been forced to watch creep over the Security Council," he declared.

In the atomic energy and disarmament commissions of U. N. where a veto is not permissable, he declared the Soviet representative "has achieved a new weapon—the slow veto."

"He has retarded the work per-

Yugoslavia Sends Protest to Italy On 'Persecution'

Rome, Sept. 22 (AP).—Yugoslavia has presented the Italian government a note protesting the "persecution of Slavs" in Italy and accusing Italy of "violation of the peace treaty," a source close to the Italian foreign office said tonight.

The note offered to discuss the matter unilaterally with Italy before "taking it up with the Big Four."

[The Catholic News Agency ARI reported from the Italian city of Gorizia today that priests and Slav peasants were streaming across the new Italian border from regions of Venezia Giulia occupied last week by Yugoslav troops, the United Press said.]

U. S. Mails Defy Sleet, Rain But Not Squirrel on a Jag

Wilmette, Ill., Sept. 22 (U.P.).—A little gray squirrel, perhaps intoxicated, delayed the United States mails today.

Mailman Anthony Hermes, 32, was making his rounds when the squirrel tried to climb up his trousers. Hermes swung with his mailbag and slapped at the squirrel. But the squirrel returned after each brushoff.

Hermes ran into an alley and crossed a lot, the squirrel after him. He ran into a bowling alley and slammed the door in the squirrel's face.

Hermes said fruit from pear rees in the neighborhood was lying around in advanced stages of fermentation.

The squirrel, he said, probably had consumed too much pear juice.

16 Nations Estimate Needs at 22 Billions During Next 4 Years

What Marshall Proposed

"IT IS LOGICAL that the United States should do whatever it is able to do to assist in the return of normal economic health in the world, without which there can be no political stability and no assured peace. Our policy is directed not against any country or doctrine, but against hunger, poverty, desperation and chaos . . .

"It is already evident that, before the United States Government can proceed much further in its efforts to alleviate the situation and help start the European world on its way to recovery, there must be some agreement among the countries of Europe as to the requirements of the situation and the part those countries themselves must take in order to give proper effect to whatever action may be undertaken by this Government.

"IT WOULD BE neither fitting nor efficacious for this Government to undertake to draw up unilaterally a program designed to place Europe on its feet economically. This is the business of the Europeans.

"The initiative, I think, must come from Europe. The role of this country should consist of friendly aid in the drafting of a European program and of later support of such a program so far as it may be practical for us to do so."

Marshall Plan Answer

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Sixteen non-Soviet nations of Europe estimated yesterday that they would need more than 22 billion dollars' worth of goods in the next four years, chiefly from the United States, to avert "catastrophe."

They promised to be everything possible to increase their own production, to set their own finances in order, and to combine in developing hydroelectric power, steel capacity and transportation.

But they warned, in a summary report submitted to the State Department and published in Washington yesterday, that these promises could be carried out "only with the assurance of a continued flow of goods from the American continent."

"If that flow should cease," the report said, "the results would be calamitous."

Answer to Marshall Plan

The report was the answer of non-Soviet Europe to Secretary Marshall's speech at Harvard on June 5, when he invited "a number, if not all" European nations to draw up a program of self-help plus American aid.

Soviet Russia and her satellites refused to take part, but the other European governments have been working in Paris for more than two months to draw up such a program. Now they have finished, and the results of their work have been submitted to Washington, for the Administration and Congress to consider, amend or approve.

Only a summary was issued yesterday, but the full report, in two thick volumes, was being flown across the Atlantic last night for submission to Secretary Marshall and President Truman.

Estimates Set at Minimum

The estimates of help needed from the United States were described in the report as "realistic" and as the very minimum that would produce recovery by the end of 1951. They took no account of the urgent emergency needs for 1947, which were the subject of consultations yesterday between Secretary Marshall and the President.

Of the estimated deficit of $22,440,000,000, the Europeans estimated that $3,110,000,000 could be financed by the World Bank and other nongovernmental sources, for equipment and other capital goods.

Most of the remainder would have to come from Congressional appropriations, although the report broke down the $22,440,000,000 deficit figure into $15,810,000,000 from the United States and $5,970,-

Russians Told Vishinsky Put Foes in 'Panic'

U. S. 'Camp of Reaction' A 'Bubbling Wrath,' Moscow Newsmen Say

Moscow, Sept. 22 (AP).—Soviet newspaper readers were told today that Andrei Vishinsky's speech last week to the U. N. General Assembly had caused "complete panic and bubbling wrath" among "American reactionaries," pictured as wanting war with Russia.

Two Soviet correspondents wrote from New York that the speech, "in which he named by name a group of warmongers, produced the impression here to a bursting bomb."

"Actually this blow at those forces opposing peaceful cooperation of powers was meted out so skillfully that the camp of American reaction is presently a picture of complete panic and bubbling wrath," their dispatch said.

The corrospondents said Vishinsky had seized the initiative from the Americans and "this turn of affairs is indeed what is most feared by reactionary circles in the United States."

RAF Marshal to Retire

London, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement Attlee's office announced tonight that Sir Sholto Douglas, marshal of the RAF, will retire as military governor of the British zone of Germany when his tour of duty ends November 1. Big Reshuffle In High Places Due in Britain

Sweeping Changes Not Expected to Hit Cabinet's 'Big Five'

London, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—A high official source said today that a sweeping government reshuffle was almost certain to take place the first week in October.

He said the changes contemplated were more important than any so far and there would be "a fairly considerable reshuffle" among the lower and middle ranks.

It was not anticipated that any of the cabinet's "big five" would be disturbed, although one of these key men may assume increased responsibilities.

The source stressed that the resignation of Prime Minister Clement Attlee was not being considered. He said Attlee returned from his holidays "fitter than ever."

2400-Mile Hop

Pilotless U. S. Plane Flown Over Ocean by Radio 'Brain'

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

An American Air Force plane completed a history-making trans-Atlantic flight without a human pilot yesterday, opening new vistas of push-button aviation.

The Douglas C-54 Skymaster completed the 2400-mile hop from Stephensville, Newfoundland, to England, guided entirely by an amazing mechanical brain.

From take-off until the four-engined craft landed and braked itself to a stop on the runway at Brize Norton airfield, 40 miles west of London, no human hand touched the controls.

Officials emphasized that the craft was not a drone controlled by a "mother" plane. Last year, two robot B-17s were flown from Hawaii to Muroc Lake, Calif. They took off by ground control, were guided to California by a "mother" plane and landed by radio control on the ground at Muroc.

The C-54 flight was quite different. It was called "fully automatic flight," in that all operations—take-off, climb, turns, navigation to destination and the landing—are controlled by the "brain" within the airplane itself.

An emergency crew of nine, plus five observers, was aboard the Skymaster, but they had nothing to do. Self-controlled, pre-set mechanisms did the whole job, aided by radio directional beams.

According to an Air Force announcement here, the plane took off from Newfoundland at 6 p. m. EDT, Sunday and landed in England yesterday morning 10 hours and 15 minutes lated. International News Service, however, quoted the commander of the flight as saying it lasted 12 hours and 5 minutes, from 1015 p. m. GMT to 10:30 a. m. GMT.

Col. James M. Gillespie, chief of the Air Force's All-Weather Flying Division at Walmington, Ohio, was in command of the operation. The craft—which is the only one of its kind in existence—has flown automatically between here and Ohio on tests several times.

Arlington Man Among 3 Soldiers Held by Yugoslavs

Trieste Free Territory (Tuesday), Sept. 23 (AP).—A United States officer and two enlisted men were taken captive on the Trieste Free Territory frontier by Yugoslavs at about noon Wednesday, an official report from headquarters of the United States troops in Trieste said early todaay.

The men were "forced across the frontier at gunpoint," the official account stated.

They were in a five-man mounted patrol of the rugged terrain between Outpost No. 5—where the Yugoslavs last week tried to force their way into the Free Territory—and Outpost No. 6.

The three men taken captive, according to Army public relations announcement, were:

First Lieut. William Van Atten, East Orange, N. J.

Pfc. Earl G. Hendrick, jr., Arlington, Va.

Pfc. Glen A. Myers, Edgely, N. Dak.

Britain Wants Aid In Palestine Rule

Will Inform U. N. Nations Must Help With Men, Money

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—Colonial Secretary Arthur Creech Jones was en route to New York tonight with what government informants said were instructions to tell the United Nations Britain will accept a workable Palestine settlement only if other nations provide men and money to help implement it.

The informants said Britain's official attitude will be neither to accept nor to reject the majority or minority plans urged by the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine (UNSCOP), until after the U.N. General Assembly debate.

The UNSCOP majority recommended the partition of Palestine. The minority report recommended a joint Arab-Jewish federal state.

Meanwhile, an Arab spokesman said the Arab states had agreed secretly 15 months ago to make a "complete economic and cultural break" with Europe and America if U. N. undertakes to partition Palestine.

May End Oil Pacts

He said a "complete economic break" might mean the Arabs would withdraw their American and British oil concessions and added:

"Something might also be done about landing rights granted to western airline companies."

British government informants said, in connection with the Palestine case that:

1. Britain, if called upon, will give up her Palestine mandate.
2. Britain will undertake her "fair share" of the responsibility involved in carrying out a workable international settlement in Palestine only if other nations join in contributing men and money.
3. Britain is prepared to withdraw from Palestine completely, within a stated period, because of home economic and manpower difficulties.

Predicts Changes

Lilienthal Calls for Vigilance

Crawfordsville, Ind., Sept. 22 (U.P.).—David E. Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, warned tonight that 't'he American scheme of things will be lost" unless private citizens exert wide-awake, democratic control over the sweeping changes which new scientific discoveries must bring.

"Important changes will come," he told a Wabash College audience. "We should make sure that the changes will be fitted into the American way of doing things."

"Atomic energy and scientific discoveries have not and need not change the fundamental principles of democracy," he said.

But he warned the public to beware lest "schemers or fools or rascals or hysterical stuffed shirts get this thing out of your hands."

Lilienthal said the discovery of atomic energy already has posed many broad, nontechnical issues which the American people can and should decide through spirited debate in every community. Among these he listed:

1. Whether a particular proposal for international control of atomic energy is workable or an ineffective "fraud upon the people."
2. The conditions under which the present government monopoly in atomic energy development can safely be changed to private competitive production.
3. What kind and size of Navy, Army and Air Force we need in the light of developments in scientific warfare.
4. What sense the proposals make that we go underground. In this connection, he said with apparent sarcasm, "some people are wanting you to get ready to move into caves."
5. The proper relation of civilian direction to the military. ("Some people are actually proposing, as a defense measure, that we prepare to turn the entire life of the country over to military control.")
6. The "wisdom and workability" of censorship of the press and radio as a means of maintaining atomic secrecy under peacetime conditions.

Germans Refuse Aid To 'Exodus' Jews

Frankfurt, Germany, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—An appeal to Germaans by newspaper and radio to offer an asylum for the 4500 "Exodus 1947" Jews unloaded at Hamburg two weeks ago met with a solid, sullen wall of resistance which would have satisfied Hitler and Goebbels, it was disclosed today.

The American-licensed Wiesbadener Kurier urged German states to raise 25,000 reichsmarks to provide a home for the refugees, the paper offered to match the sum.

The pleas were answered by a flood of vitriolic letters which followed to the word Nazi propaganda.

1000 Jewish Refugees Head for Palestine

Naples, Italy, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—Nearly 1000 Jewish refugees embarked in small boats from Cefole near Salermo before dawn today, presumably for Polestine, police reported.

The Jews said they had come from displaced persons camps in Germany.

Miami Office Workers Battle New Winds

NO GENTLE ZEPHYR—Miami's office-bound workers battled high winds again yesterday due to the tropical disturbance approaching the Florida West Coast

Citrus Crop Loss

The Agriculture Department estimated yesterday that last week's hurricane caused the loss of between four and five million boxes of grapefruit and one to two million boxes of oranges. Florida last year produced about 30 million boxes of grapefruit and about 53 million boxes of oranges.

Losses included 300,000 to 400,000 acres of snap beans and 2500 acres of tomatoes.

Storm Damages Michigan Crops

Detroit, Sept. 22 (AP).—Heavy damage to crops and property was left today in the wake of rain and windstorm that swept across southern Michigan Sunday.

Winds that at times were reported to have reached 60 miles an hour flattened trees, tore down wires and left many roads blocked.

portant immediate results of the demonstration will point the way toward safer and more reliable flying in all types of weather. Development of the mechanisms employed should take further burdens off the pilot on long flights.

It also may be a long step toward the day when bombers or guided missiles loaded with atomic explosives will be able to cross oceans. But still greater strides must be made before this is possible, for the present craft requires a radio beam at the landing point to guide it to its destination. And an enemy is hardly likely to cooperate to this extent.

Besides Gillespie, and his crew, several civilian experts and two RAF observers made the flight.

The plane—similar to the commercial DC-4—will remain two weeks in England, demonstrating the equipment to RAF officials.

Here's the way "fully automatic flight" operates:

The plane's engines are warmed up and the craft taxis to the end of the runway with a pilot at the controls. The "brain" aboard has been preset to do a number of things at the proper time en route. Destination has been determined, fuel consumption estimated, power settings for the engines set, radios tuned properly and other adjustments made.

Then the pilot can push a button, setting the "brain" into operation, and get out of the plane. In all tests so far, the crew has remained aboard to take over the controls if something goes wrong.

Timing devices in the automatic fight controller "rev" up the engines to full power, unlock the brakes after eight seconds and the craft starts to roll. Then the "master sequence selector"—teh real center of the plane takes over.

At 800 feet above the ground, a pressure "stat" control, something like the thermostat used in heat control in many homes, reverses the throttle, retracts the wheels and raises the plane's flaps. Then the plane climbs to an altitude previously set for the flight. The "stat" sets the engines for cruising speed.

Here the magnetic heading control cuts in, an air log starts counting off the miles, and the plane turns and heads toward its destination. In yesterday's trans-Atlantic flight, the first objective was a ship in mid-ocean giving off a radio beam. Then the "brain" automatically shifted to another wave length—transmitted from another station ship farther east.

Reaching this point, the craft tuned in on the British beam which guided it to its destination. En route, the automatic pilot and other controls kept the plane on course, allowing for cross-winds, etc.

Approaching Brize Norton, the auto-pilot "homed" in on the selected radio compass station. When it passed over an outer marker, the throttle automatically was cut, the elevators were moved for a descent. It then came in for a landing on the regular instrument landing system similar to that used at the National Airport. Instruments, rather than a human pilot, however, kept the plane on the glide-path beam.

At 800 feet, the pressure "stat" started the landing gear and flaps machinery into motion, and cut back the throttle. After the plane hit the runway, brakes automatically applied brought it to a stop.

Jet Bombers Have Range Of 3000 Miles

Three of America's new jet bombers will have a range in excess of 3000 statute miles, an Air Force announcement revealed yesterday.

This was disclosed in an order redesignating bombardment planes according to a new system of classification. Boeing B-29 "superfortresses"—heretofore classed as "very heavy bombers" were downgraded to mere "medium" bombardment craft.

Instead of four classes, ranging from very heavy to light, hereafter there will be only heavy, medium and light, depending upon range, no size.

The huge Consolidate-Vultee B-36 and the Northrop B-35 Flying Wing are the only new heavies. Heavy bombers, according to the new order, are craft with a tactical operating radius of over 2500 nautical miles. The directive defines tactical operating radius as three-eights of the "optimum range at optimum cruising speed and altitude, at design gross weight and design bomb load."

Medium bombers are craft with a tactical operating radius of from 1000 to 2500 nautical miles, that is with a range of over 2660 nautical or 3000 statute miles. Listed in the medium class are the Martin XB-48 and the Boeing XZ-47, both jet craft, the Northrop YB-49—jet version of the Flying Wing—the B-29 and new Boeing B-50.

Listed as light bombers—with a tactical operating radius of less than 1000 nautical miles—were the Douglas A-26, the North American jet B-45 and the Consolidated-Vultee XB-46. Heretofore, the Air Force had released no data on the range of ney jet bombers. Their relatively short range is one of the present difficulties with the craft.

Montgomery Ward Net Drops Despite Record Volume

Chicago, Sept. 22 (AP).—Montgomery Ward & Co. reported today that although sales for the first half of its fiscal year broke all records net profit was $17,624,394, equal to $2.60 a shae of common stock, compared with $24,558,600 or $4.57 a share for the first six months last year. Common shares outsanding totaled 6,502,378 shares this year against 5,217,147 last year.

Net sales for the six months ended July 31 were $508,647,868, compared with $418,397,220 in the comparable 1946 period.

Sewell Avery, chairman, said the company "took the markdowns necessary to clear out all stocks of substandard merchandise acquired following the war period."

"Other factors contributing to the decline in profits," Avery said, "were the lower prices accompanying more normal competitive merchandising, the higher cost of merchandise with less than compensating increases in selling prices, and increased expenses arising principally from higher wage levels and cost of catalogues and advertising."

NMU Chief Curran Warns Of Reds but Wins Test Votes

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—The 90,000-member National Maritime Union (CIO) opened its sixth national convention today in a stormy session punctuated by angry bursts of oratory by its president and a declaration that the Communist Party had set up machinery to "handle" the meeting.

But by the end of the day's business, Joseph Curran, anti-Communist and head of the Seamen's Union, and his group which has supported him on the year-long struggle against what he has termed a "Red influence" in the organization, counted two victories won on tests of strength on the convention floor.

The meeting voted that each of the convention committees consist of "rank and file" members of the union, excluding national officers, and approved a proposal to elect committee members by secret ballot.

Curran, Jack Lawrenson, a vice president, and M. Hedley Stone, national treasurer, voted in favor. The other three national officers of the union, charged by Curran with representing a Communist-led faction of the union, voted against.

Later, however, acting on advice of the NMU's general counsel, Curran ruled as out of order the action by the convention delegates limiting committees to "rank and file" members.

Curran, his career as president at stake because of his anti-Communist stand, assumed the offensive soon after the convention's opening and asserted that "machinery has been set up by the Communist Party to handle this convention."

Angered by almost continuous interruptions to the convention business by delegates rising to make points of order, Curran termed these actions "the tactics used by the Communist Party when it doesn't have a majority."

He told the delegates that the rule that "drunks" who interfere with the convention business "will be tossed out" also applied "to those who deliberately interfere with the convention."

Another Plot Seen Against Czech Rule

Character Will Tell

Atom Future Hinges on Us, Vinson Says

Cleveland, Sept. 22.—Chief Justice Vinson tonight said atomic energy may doom civilization or bring great new gains in human welfare.

Which it will be depends on how we meet the challenge of the age, Vinson told the American Bar Association Convention here.

The war, he said, left the world in need of rebuilding, and out of that need come problems in every field—"in the political and economic, in the social and intellectual and in the moral and spiritual realms."

The Chief Justice said these problems brought danger and difficulty, but that—as in the case of the atom—the opportunities were just as great as the dangers. All the problems, he added, are human problems and, with courage, patience, tolerance and understanding, are capable of human solution.

Losing faith in ourselvs is the worst danger, Vinson said, pointing out that many widely held ideologies question the ability of man to determine his own destiny, seeing him as greedy, irritational and fereft of dignity. This idea, he said, not only is part of totalitarian doctrine but underlies the thinking of some in our midst.

"This conception contains the seeds of destruction," the Chief Justice said, "we must resist it and prove it fallacious."

He saw an equal danger in the loss of respect for the law, and he warned that without the supremacy of law we should have either chaos or dictatorship.

Those who would ignore the challenges of the age and hope things turn out all right, Vinson said, are dodging responsibility.

"A policy of drift can lead only to disaster," he remarked.

Just as bad, he added, are those who fight all change and those who would change everything, for both "make impossible the effective defense of the foundation rocks of their civilization which are essential and timeless."

Both groups, Vinson explained, fail to distinguish between the essential values of civilization and the transitory forms by which those values are given expression.

"We need," he declared, "to devote our full intelligence and greatest efforts to the task of devising ways and means whereby those essential values can be given their most complete expression in a world of flux and change."

Paul B. Rix, president of the bar association, in an earlier speech, declared that Soviet foreign policy was founded upon principles of world revolution by any and all means of aggression.

Slovakia Official Tells His Congress It's Most Serious

Bratislava, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 21 (AP).—Karel Smitke, vice president of the Slovak State Council of Ministers, told a partisan congress today that a new conspiracy to overthrow the Czechoslovak government had been discovered in Slovakia.

The new plot, he said, was more serious and dangerous than one uncovered last week in which 106 persons have been formally charged. In the earlier plot, the government said, the conspirators planned to kill President Eduard Benes and overthrow the republic.

(The Slovakian ministry of the interior said an alleged plot to overthrow the government was linked to Slovaks in the United States and at the Vatican.

("During interrogation (of alleged leaders) several more important personalities of Slovak public life were found guilty and consequently 20 of them were seized," the ministry said.)

Allied Sources Bare Activities in 'Plot'

Vienna, Austria, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—Activities of elusive Stefan Bandera, guerilla chief and champion for more than 25 years of an independent Ukrainian republic, were laid bare today by Allied sources, who linked him with recent "plots" against the Czech government.

They said Bandera's terrorists hve pillaged, robbed and killed their way back and forth across eastern Europe for a generation.

Bandera will fight for any eastern European power who will lend even lip service support to a free Ukraine, informants said. Last week armed stragglers, who alleged they were Bandera's followers, began to trickle into the American occupation zone of Germany. They said between 15,000 and 20,000 of Bandera's men had been annihilated by Polish and Russian troops in south Poland in June.

Warsaw branded the story "ridiculous," especially that Soviet trops were operating on Polish soil, but Allied sources insisted Bandera has been operating west and northwest of Lvov, and that south and southeast of Lvov was yet another guerilla group under a man who calls himself Taras Bulba, the name of an ancient Ukranian nationalist hero. His real name is supposed to be Barovets.

It could be "concidence," these sources added, that guerillas from one or another of these two groups swept down from the Carpathian mountains into Slovakia on pillaging forays just as the "plot" against the present Czechoslovakian government was disclosed in Prague.

Records show Bandera first emerged about 1922 as an anti-Soviet leader of the Ukranian nationalist movement.

Bandera was caught in 1934. He was in prison in Warsaw until the Germans stormed the city in 1939. He then assumed command of a force he called the National Ukrainian Union. Later he acted as espionage agent in Soviet-occupied Poland for the Germans.

When Bandera realized the Germans were welching on promises to aid him he declared himself in opposition and the Germans threw him in jail.

In 1943 he sold the German "a bill of goods" and was released on condition he would fight Soviet partisans. Instead, he collaborated with the Russians against the Germans in the Ukraine.

This partnership lasted until 1945 when Bandera fell out with the Russians and resumed his independent fight against Soviet forces.

But Views Differed . . .

Policy of Russia Leading To Disaster, Britain Warns

sistently," said McNeil, "not by voting 'No,' but by a policy of non-cooperation despite a large majority, for the measures."

[United Nations Assembly President Oswaldo Aranha said tonight he had turned down a request from Vishinsky for a second speech in the Assembly's general debate, the Associated Press said.

[Secretary General Trygve Lie decided to make a formal appeal at tomorrow's session for the great powers to put aside their differences and cooperate for peace. His office announced his speech would close the general debate.]

Vishinsky's speech was "clearly meant as a comedy piece" when he complained of the lack of American cooperation, said McNeil.

"Why didn't he bring with him to the stand as an example of the meek, acquiescent, the cooperative, his colleague and our friend, Mr. Gromyko? Why didn't he display as an example of the Soviet cooperative attitude, the fact that they have now registered 20 vetoes in the Security Council and my poor belligerent, dominant government hasn't used even one?"

He termed "even more ludicrous" Vishinsky's picture "of poor little undefended, terrorized Soviet Russia trembling at the threats from Athens and Ankara."

As for Vishinsky's comparison of Winston Churchill with Hitler, McNeil declared that the British wartime Prime Minister "walked about the streets of London in 1940 and the spring of 1941 as an example to our population and to all the West, unperturbed by the bombs hurled down by German planes, serviced, for all we know, by Russian oil."

Vishinsky, he added, was "reared on Marxism," but has "now blossomed forth as a champion of laissez faire economics" with his complaints that the Marshall Plan means a loss of sovereign rights to the nations accepting American aid.

"Mr. Vishinsky says the United States are villainous; they are disturbers of the peace; they are breakers-up of this international structure. Why? Because they apparently choose to operate this same inalienable right to their own property which Mr. Vishinsky approves in every European power but disapproves of without reserve in the case of the United States."

This sort of reasoning by the Soviets, he said, is the "inconsistency which we always associate with frantic, continuous and irresponsible propaganda, but which can have no place in individuals or governments of common arrangements are to be fashioned."

The answer to Vishinsky's charges that Americans accuse the Russians of preparing for war, he said, is "not to imprison any Russians or to suppress American or British newspapers."

"The reply is not to criticize others because they allow their citizens to speak freely, but to urge that all countries should tolerate views freely expressed by citizens of free states."

Dimitri Z. Manuilsky faithfully echoed the words of Vishinsky in his speech as head ofthe Ukranian Soviet delegation.

He even used the word "warmonger" in describing flagrant intervention by the United States and Britain in Greece and China.

The United States is "everywhere" taking over "the bankrupt imperial policy" of Britain. Its resultant actions," he said, are "in marked contrast to the strict adherence to the Charter which has characterized the policy of the Soviet Union."

While the Soviets have withdrawn troops from Iran, he added, "the Netherlands are even now conducting a war of aggression against the Indonesians."

He charged that war criminals are being shielded and trained among displaced persons camps in western Germany.

Certain powers, he said, are attempting to achieve "world hegemony" by changing the voting procedures in the Security Council and the Charter. The aim, he said, was to "use the United Nations as a tool" and create an atmosphere of "lawlessness." It would then become an adjunct of the American State Department.

Stanoje Simic, Yugoslav Foreign Minister, also attacked the Marshall Plan. He said it really is "aimed at splitting Europe into rival blocks" as part of the Truman doctrine. In place of Manuilsky's charge that the United States was seeking "world hegemony," Simic substituted the words "world arbitrator."

Since the United States helped the government of Italy shift to the right, he declared, there has been a reappearance of armed Fascist bands on the Yugoslav border.

Simic opposed any change in the veto privilege and the creation of an interim assembly. He denied that Yugoslavia was in any way responsible for the border warfare of her neighbor, Greece.

Dr. Guillermo Belt of Cuba advocated elimination of the veto entirely, abuse of which means that the General Assembly must be given more power. The present Charter, he added, is not adequate to maintain peace and must, therefore, be strengthened.

The Turkish delegation, also recommending elimination of the veto, replied to Vishinsky's charges of warmongering the Turkish press in just one paragraph.

"It would be wishful thinking," said Selim Sarper, chief of its delegation, "to expect that the press and radios in the Soviet Union could continuously publish and broadcast provocative slanders and offensive statements levelled at my country, without some sort of reflexive response from the Turkish press in the face of such psychological aggression which is commonly called a war of nerves."

Italian Reds Set Today to Test Gasperi

Rome, Sept. 22 (AP).—Italian Communists and Socialists, shifting their oratory from the public squares to the floor of the Constituent Assembly, will seek to morrow to bring down Premier Alcide de Gasperi's Christian Democratic government with a no-confidence vote.

Palmiro Togliatti, Communist leader, and his Socialist ally, Pietro Nenni, were expected to fire the opening parliamentary shots.

Observers predicted the debate would tie up the cabinet in a month-long assembly wrangle, rather than defeat the government.

Giuseppe di Vittorio, Communist general secretary of the General Confederation of Labor, announced that 25,000 Rome province farmhands quit work today to obtain the same wage increases granted one million north Italian farm workers Saturday.

Soviet Wants Austria Area Given to Tito

Vienna, Austria, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—The Russian representative on the Austrian Treaty Commission today pressed Yugoslavia's territorial claim against Austria despite American insistence that there should be no border changes.

The Russian urged that Marshal Tito's demand for "Slovene Carinthia" should be given "favorable consideration" by the four occupying powers.

U. S. Charges Ingratitude To Albania

The United States accused Albania yesterday of a "sad act of ingratitude" in "fabricating" charges that American officials were involved in attempts to sabotage Premier Enver Hoxha's Communist regime.

The State Department said the charges were made in the current trial of 25 individuals at Tirana and are "entirely untrue."

The trials, the department asserted, "are clearly an attempt of the Albanian regime to perpetuate itself by means of oppression and the terrorization of Albanian liberal, patriotic opposition elements."

"From the time of its establishment as a modern state Albania has been a striking example of disinterested American aid," the department said. The little country won its independence in the first place largely through the efforts of President Wilson at the 1919 peace conference.

Soviet's Korean Charges Baseless, Says Connally

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—Senator Connally (D., Tex.) today labeled as "baseless" Russian charges that Secretary of State Marshall had distorted the truth to imply Russia was to blame for delays in Korean independence.

"Secretary Marshall and the United States delegation to the United Nations want to make it a real instrument of peace and not of war," the ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committe said on his arrival here by ship from Rio de Janeiro with Representative Sol Bloom (D., N. Y.).

Greece Will Increase Army To 150,000 With U.S. Approval

Athens, Greece, Sept. 22 (U.P.)—The Greek general staff conferred today on plans to increase the army to 150,000—10,000 more than originally agreed upon by the United States—and to call up 50,000 additional men in the national guard by October 1.

[Dwight P. Griswold, head of the American mission to Greece, said today the mission had agreed that the Greek army, now 120,000 strong, would be increased temporarily by 20,000, the Associated Press reported.

[Griswold added that it could be inferred from the army increase that "reconstruction appropriations will be decreased to allow for military requirements."]

Greek authorities reported that 10,000 weapons and a quantity of clothing for the national guard have been loaded on a ship in the United States bound for Greece.

Press reports from Larissa said 150 guerillas were killed in a 10-hour battle near Kastonohoria in eastern Greece yesterday and 30 captured.

Premier Themistocles Sophoulis told newsmen that reports announcing the withdrawal of British troops from Greece were erroneous.

[Bandit activity is the principal obstacle to the economic recovery of Greece, Representative Thomas A. Jenkins (R., Ohio), chairman of a congressional subcommittee on foreign aid said tonight after a tour of the area, the Associated Press reported.

["We find the mission (headed by Dwight D. Griswold) has made an excellent start on the program," he said.]

Taft and Foes Launch Debate

however, that Taft will decide to make the 1948 race when it is time to announce his decision the middle of next month.

Observers felt Taft had already indicated this intention through his choice of such issues as the Palestine question and western reclamation, and occasional slips of tongue. Certainly all the local GOP committees en route take it for granted, referring to his "candidacy" openly in many an introductory speech.

U. S. Can't Win World War 3 Even With Atom, Wallace Says

Boston, Sept. 22 (AP).—Even with its wealth and atom bombs, Henry A. Wallace said today, the United States "will never win a third world war."

Wallace, speaking at the annual convention of the CIO United Electrical Workers, declared that in the event of another war the United States would not have strong allies, and he added: "The war that is being bred for us must be stopped."

Wallace also called for a special session of Congress to enact a new rationing and price control bill "with teeth in it," assailed the Taft-Hartley Labor Act and termed the loyalty investigation of Federal employes an "inquisition."

The former Vice President—who is urged in five resolutions before the UEW convention to run for President—told the 1000 delegates he would continue to "work within the Democratic Party" . . . "unless and until I am convinced . . . that this Administration is committed to out red-baiting the red-baiters, and to fomenting a final war"

Wallace also singled out Senator Taft (R., Ohio) for his suggestion that the American people could help bring down prices by eating less, declaring:

"If the total program of the men in power today is advice to eat less—we shall eat less and less and less as inflation increases and a depression is made inevitable."

Wallace said that although he criticized American foreign policy "it isn't that I think Russian policy is better, or that I want to go to Russia, or that I want to bring communism here, or that I want to compromise with evil.

"It is very simply that I want—and I hope you want—an American policy which is American, which is democratic, which is principled."

America's Reaction Awaited by Europe

Economic Aid Now Up to America, Bevin Says as Report Is Signed

Paris, Sept. 22 (AP).—Sixteen nations of western Europe looked to America today for its reaction on their request for 22 billions in economic aid under the Marshall Plan.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin flew from London for the signing of the report in the clock tower of the Grand Palais.

Bevin declared that immediate aid was necessary in order to remove the threat of a crisis for which "there is no precedent in history for judging what shape it may take."

[Later, Bevin told International News Service that "it would be incredible if the United States turned down a project that would aid her as much as it would western Europe.

["We cannot think in terms of national interest now. To aid a neighbor means to aid oneself in this shrunken world."

[Bevin denied that he ever asked for a "redistribution" of the Fort Knox gold, and said he merely suggested that the United States "invest" a minute portion of its gold supply in a project "which will yield her huge profits." He said his remarks had been distorted.]

Russia and the states within her sphere of influence have not participated in drawing up the report. Bevin expressed regret at their absence today and added:

"For the future, as in the past, the door remains wide open to all those of good will who will want to contribute to the healthy life of Europe and thereby end the misery which war has left behind.

"Our goal is the economic unity of Europe as the best means that we can conceive to provide for the happiness of its people."

He said it was "not an appeal to charity," but a "legitimate request for assistance to tide over the period of recovery and to create in turn a situation in which Europe can make its contribution to the postwar world."

Acting French Foreign Minister Pierre-Henri Teitgen said:

"We have already expressed our sincere regrets at not seeing around this table a meeting of the entire European family. We repeat that the door is open and will constantly remain so. We hope that others will come in."

30 Billion Lend-Lease Program Urged in U. N.

Flushing, N. Y., Sept. 22 (U.P.).—A peacetime lend-lease program of 30 billion dollars to 35 billion dollars financed by the United States to insure the world against depression was called for today at the General Assembly of the United Nations.

Dr. Alfonso Lopez, chairman of "an investment of 30 billion dollars or 35 billion dollars in world prosperity and peace would signal the transition to a new world order under the leadership of the United States and give the United States an epoch making opportunity to help mankind out of its present tribulations. "We sincerely believe that the opportunity is worth the price."

Official Summary of Report on Needs of Western Europe

Below is the official summary of the report of the Paris Cooperation Committee set up by 16 European countries to study the implications of the Marshall plan.

1. The report is designed primarily as a close and careful analysis of the maladjustments which have resulted from the war and as an examination of what the participating countries can do for themselves and for each other to work toward a lasting solution.

2. The scale of the destruction and dislocation of the second world war was greater than that of the first. Agricultural and industrial production was severely reduced, traditional sources of food and raw material supply were cut off, so that when the war was over the devastated countries had to start again almost from the beginning. Thanks to the great efforts of the European countries themselves and to the generous assistanc of the United States, other countries and UNRRA, recovery proceeded fast. But it was not maintained in the winter of 1946-47, and the European economy suffered a serious setback. Coal continued in short supply and the lack of it curtailed industrial production. Food and other commodities remained scarce and the prices of food and primary products rose. The foreign exchange resources of the participating countries had, therefore, to be drawn upon heavily. An exceptionally severe winter was followed by a long drought and intensified these difficulties, so that by the summer of 1947 the earlier hope of a quick recovery had receded.

3. As the work of the Committee of Cooperation was proceeding the foreign exchange crisis continued to gather momentum. A number of countries had to impose further import restrictions, except for the purchase of cereals, coal and other essential suplies. Action on similar lines is likely to become necessary in the near future in most of the participating countries. The early recovery is now halted and the crisis is deepening. The circumstances in which the report has been drawn up give it the chafacter of an initial report. To deal with any amendments which appear desirable it may be necessary to publish supplementary reports which take account of the development of the economic situation.

4. The purpose of the report is to formulate an economic recovery program for the participating countries which is aimed at putting Europe on its feet by the end of 1951. This recovery program is based upon four lines of action:

(1) A strong production effort by each of the participating countries.

(2) The creation of internal financial stability.

(3) The maximum cooperation between the participating countries.

(4) A solution of the problem of the participating countries' trading deficit with the American continent, particularly by exports.

5. The participating countries are normally dependent on a large volume of imports—raw materials, feeding stuffs, and in certain cases food—from the rest of the world. Traditionally these were paid for partly by export of goods and services and partly by income from overseas investments. Because of the dislocation caused by the war import needs are temporarily larger than normal, investment earnings have been reduced and exports have not yet been able to attain the level to redress the balance. The problem before the participating countries and the basic aim of the recovery program is thus to revive and expand their production, so as to eliminate abnormal demand on the outside world and produce for export the increased volume of goods required to pay for the imports the participating countries will continue to need.

6. The report assumes a high degree of self-help by the countries concerned and mutual help between them. In order to ascertain what could be achieved, technical committees were set up to make a special examination of agriculture, fuel and power, steel, timber and transport, together with the related industries, such as agricultural and mining machinery, and the general problem of manpower. The recovery program is designed to achieve the following total results by 1951:

(1) Restoration of prewar bread grain and other production, with large increases above prewar in sugar and potatoes, some increases in oils and fats, and as fast an expansion in livestock products as supplies of feeding stuffs will allow.

(2) Increase of coal output to 584 million tons, i. e., 145 million tons above the 1947 level (an increase of one third) and 30 million tons above the 1938 level.

(3) Expansion of electricity output by nearly 70 billion KWH or 40 per cent above 1947 and a growth of generating capacity by 25 million KWH or two thirds above prewar.

(4) Development of oil refining capacity in terms of crude oil throughout by 17 million tons to two and a half times the prewar level.

(5) Increase of crude steel production by 80 per cent above 1947 to a level of 55 million tons or 10 million tons (20 per cent) above 1938.

(6) Expansion of inland transport facilities to carry a 25 per cent greater load in 1951 than in 1938.

(7) Restoration of prewar merchant fleets of the participating countries by 1951.

(8) Supply from European production of most of the capital equipment needed for these expansions.

The various countries have undertaken to use all their efforts to develop their national production in order to achieve these targets. Of particular importance are the French and Italian grain production programs which aim at recovering prewar levels by 1951 and the United Kingdom coal production program which is designed to exceed the prewar level by 1951. These production programs, taken as a whole, represent an expansion of output similar in general scale to that achieved by the United States in the mobilization years 1940-44. This production effort provides the foundation for a sound and workable European economy.

7. The creation of internal financial stability in certain countries is a necessary condition for the accomplishment of their production programs, and undertakings have been given by the countries concerned to apply all necessary measures to lead to the rapid achievement of this stability. The quick success of stabilization will to a very large extent depend on adequate foreign assistance being available during the period when stabilization is being achieved. No precise calculation can be made of the amount required without examining the position of each of the countries concerned at the time when stabilization is undertaken. But from such estimates as can be made the amount likely to be required will be of the order of three million dollars.

8. The maximum use will be made by the participating countries of their own raw material resources, manpower and productive capacity. This process will be stimulated by measures to be taken to secure progressive relaxation of import restrictions, to improve payments arrangements between the various countries and to transfer surplus labor. An announcement has already been made about the setting up of a Customs Union study group which will make a first report within three months of its being convened. The French government has stated that it is ready to commence negotiations with all European governments who wish to enter a Customs Union with France and whose national economies are capable of being combined with the French economy in such a way as to make a viable unit. The Italian government had associated itself with this declaration.

9. Apart from mutual help designed to increase supplies of scarce commodities and to increase the flow of trade between the participating countries, agreement has been achieved on collective action on spcial problems as follows:

(1) A series of projects is being developed for common planning of the exploitation of new sources of electric power. The plan selected by the committee provides for the erection of a series of power plants to exploit the hydro-electric resources of the Alps, certain German lignite deposits, and Italian reserves of geothermic energy. This work involves the cooperative development of resources cutting across frontiers, and the decisions are being taken without regard to national frontiers. The common planning required is now proceeding.

(2) Encouragement of the standardization of mining and electrical supplies and freight cars.

(3) Examination of the possibility of securing the more efficient use of freight cars by pooling arrangements and by international study of the flows of traffic.

(4) Arrangements for the interchange of information by the steel producing countries about their programs of modernization and extension so that each country may take account of plans made by the others.

10. Arrangements have been made for continuing the work of mutual help and consultation begun in Paris both through the United Nations machinery and in other ways. A joint organization charged with the task of reviewing progress made in the execution of the program is also contemplated.

11. The report shows that even after taking full account of the supplies which they can produce for themselves and which they can hope to obtain from the rest of the world, the participating countries will require large quantities of food, fuel, raw materials and capital equipment from the American continent. Without this flow of goods the whole recovery program will be in jeopardy. The requirements stated take account of the supplies likely to be available. They do not represent extravagant importing. Food consumption at the end of the period will be less than the prewar level, and the estimates are framed on the basis that in many countries restrictions on consumption of food, clothing and gasoline will continue to be necessary.

12. The scale of the problem is shown by the combined deficit of the participating countries and western Germany with the American continent, which is given in the following tables. The size of the deficit is to a large extent attributable to lack of supplies formerly available from eastern Europe, southeast Asia and other non-European sources. It may be possible to meet part of the deficit through the International Bank for Development Reconstruction, private investment and credit operations, and, for a few countries, by the use of their limited available assets.

	$000 Million
	1948	1949	1950	1951	Total
U. S. A.	5.64	4.27	3.28	2.62	15.81
Rest of American continent	1.94	1.82	1.30	.91	5.97
	7.58	6.09	4.58	3.53	21.78
Deficit of dependent territories	.46	.26	.07	.13	.86
Total	8.04	6.35	4.65	3.40	22.44

Estimated imports from the American continent include equipment as well as comodities, such as food and coal. If imports of equipment, other than agricultural machinery and coal-mining machinery to which special considerations apply, were financed by loans from the International Bank or by other credit operations, the deficit remaining to be dealt with could be reduced as follows:

	$000 Million
	1948	1949	1950	1951	Total
Deficit as shown in above table	8.04	6.35	4.65	3.40	22.44
Less equipment assumed to be financed by International Bank, etc.	.92	.89	.70	.90	3.31
Total	7.12	5.46	3.95	2.50	19.33

13. The need for an intense effort to expand exports from the participating countries to the rest of the world is recognized throughout the report as essential to help reduce the deficit over the four-year period. Given favorable world conditions, it is estimated that the participating countries and western Germany at the end of the period will have a substantial surplus in their trading account with non-participating countries other than those of the American continent. For the year 1951 this is tentatively estimated as $1,800,000,000 and for the four-year period at $2,810,000,000. Only if there is a sufficient flow of dollars to the rest of the world to enable the participating countries to earn dollars, or their equivalent, for this surplus, will it be possible to offset this surplus against the dollar deficit with the American continent.

14. The report emphasizes that whilst the first element of the recovery program must be to increase European production, it will be impossible to right the problem unless market conditions in the American continent allow both Europe and other parts of the world to sell goods there in increasing quantities. The maladjustment between the productive power and resources of the American continent and the participating countries is due to many causes and cannot be righted by European action alone. The purpose of the report is to submit proposals for the necessary restorative action on the European side by production, stabilization and cooperation between the participating countries, but this cannot complete the task. The report concludes with the following phrases:

"The problem which the committee of cooperation has been working to solve in Paris is the aftermath of the war. The committee now submits its proposal for the necessary restorative action on the European side by production, stabilization and cooperation between the participating countries, as well as by measures to stimulate the free flow of goods and services. These proposals are reinforced to definite and specific undertakings by each of the countries concerned. But these undertakings can be successfully carried out only with the assurance of a continued flow of goods from the American continent; if that flow should cease the results would be calamitous. Europe's dollar resources are running low. One country after another is already being forced by lack of dollars to cut down vital imports of food and raw materials from the American continent. If nothing is done a catastrophe will develop as stocks become exhausted. If too little is done, and if it is done too late, it will be impossible to provide the momentum needed to get the program under way. Life in Europe will become increasingly unstable and uncertain; industries will grind to a gradual halt for lack of material and fuel, and the food supply of Europe will diminish and begin to disappear. In those circumstances the participating nations have welcomed the opportunity to prepare and present to the United States a statement of their plans and requirements. Through meetings between representatives of the United States and of the participating nations, the details of that statement can be filled in and the means of recovery more precisely defined.

In the last analysis the external means of recovery can in the largest measure only come from the United States, which has by its assistance in the last two years already rescued Europe from collapse and chaos. Unfortunately, the size of the problem has proved greater than was expected; the disruption caused by the war was more far-reaching and the obstacles to recovery more formidable than was realized even six months ago. This report contains, it is believed, a realistic appreciation of the situation. In it the participating countries have set out the facts as they see them and on the basis of those facts have formulated a recovery program. Their program is based upon the fullest use of their existing productive capacity. In drawing it up they have sought to reduce their needs from the American continent to the minimum consistent with its achievement. The American people, through their Government and their Congress, will consider this program and determine whether the means can be found of supplying those needs. On their decision will depend whether Europe can achieve economic stability and thereby be enabled to make her full contribution to the welfare of the world.

000,000 from "the rest of the American continent."

This suggested that the resources of Latin America and Canada would be called upon in unexpectedly large measure to supplement what the United States could supply.

"Diminishing" Schedule

The estimates called for diminishing amounts of help year by year—about eight billion dollars in 1948, about six billion in 1949, about four and a half billion in 1950 and three and a half billion in 1951.

Herve Alphand of France, reporter general of the 16-nation conference, said yesterday that if this help is granted and if Europe's own efforts have the expected results, "there is every reason to believe thaat at the end of 1951 the 16 European countries will be in a position to go forward without further special external assistance."

This satisfies a condition laid down publicly by Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett, who said earlier this month that the program would provide for steadily diminishing help from the United States.

Nothing in the report was scanned more anxiously in Washington yesterday than the sections dealing with Europe's self-help. For Secretary Marshall made it plain in his Harvard speech and other officials have repeated it since, that genuine self-help by Europe was a prerequisite of any further American aid.

Self-Help Program

The self-help program as agreed upon in Paris fell into three main sections.

To begin with, the 16 countries have agreed to set production targets, including a one-third increase in coal production above the 1947 figure, an 80 per cent increase in crude steel production over this year's figure, and the restoration of prewar bread grain and other cereal production.

Secondly, the 16 nations have undertaken to apply "all necessary measures" to create internal financial stability, especially stabilization of their currencies.

Finally—and this section was read with the greatest interest in Washington—they have given a sweeping promise to make "the maximum use" of their own resources of raw materials, manpower and productive capacity.

Specifically, the 16 countries have agreed:

1. To build a series of power plants to exploit the hydroelectric resources of the Alps, certain German deposits of lignite or brown coal, and Italian reserves of fuel in the earth. This work, according to the report, "involves the cooprative development of resources cutting across frontiers, and the decisions are being taaken without regard to national frontiers."

2. To encourage the standardizing of mining and electrical supplies and freight cars.

3. To examine "the possibilites of securing the more efficient use of freight cars by pooling arrangements and by international study of the flows of traffic." The report made no reference to the pooling of freight cars already in operation in western Europe under the European Central Inland Transport organization.

4. To interchange information among the steel-producing countries about their programs of modernization and extension of plant capacity "so that each country may take account of plans made by the others."

Dramatic Implications

This item has dramatic implications, for it suggests that European nations are at last ready to put new steel plants where they will do the most good to western Europe as a whole, regardless of nationalistic considerations.

Officials here would not comment publicly yesterday on these projects, although privately some high officials found most of them vague and disappointing.

The sense of disappointment was not lessened by the fact that the 16 countries agreed to set up a committee to study the possibilities of customs union, a favorite goal of recent American policy. The committee will have to make its first report within three months after being called together.

Without waiting for this committee, the French and Italian governments have announced their readiness to negotiate with all governments that wish to enter a customs union with themselves.

Legislators Demand To Be Shown on Bid

Members of both parties in Congress yesterday took a cautious "show me" attitude toward the Marshall program request for 22 billion dollars to help Western Europe back on its feet, 19 billion of which would be paid by the United States directly.

Representative Joseph W. Martin (R., Mass.), Speaker of the House, said he wanted to have the report of the special House Committee on Foreign Aid before he commented on the plan drawn up in Paris by the 16 nations.

The committee, headed by Representative Christian Herter (R., Mass.) is now making an on-the-spot inquiry in Europe.

Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) said: "I am inclined to believe there will be no disposition on the part of Congress to block the Marshall program if all the facts disclose that it is needed. But Congress must have the facts."

Senator Guy Gordon (R., Oreg.) commented:

"The figure of 20 billion dollars sounds mighty big. I don't believe that the Congress, in the name of economy or for any other reason, will let people starve, but before I go along with the Marshall Plan I want some assurance under other than a pious hope that it will accomplish the intended results."

Senator William Knowland (R., Calif.): "It's hard to know right off whether those are rock-bottom figures. They may be like some of our government departments—setting their sights higher because they expect to be cut."

Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.), ranking minority member of the Appropriations group, declared:

"It's a very expensive plan and calls for a great lot of money. But it seems to have considerable merit."

Health Dept. Ups Request For VD Funds

Washington's fight against venereal disease must still go a long way to overtake a postwar boom in new VD cases.

This was emphasized yesterday in the District Health Department's request for more funds for its venereal disease control program in its 1949 budget starting next July 1.

This year the city has $88,044 for venereal disease control. For next year, $135,561 is asked.

About half is for hiring nine more field investigators at $2645 each a year. Eight of those would make up for the same number of investigators now working for the District but paid with Federal funds. This Federal help is not expected to be available in the 1949 fiscal year.

Total admissions to venereal disease clinics, exclusive of those going to the rapid treatment center at Gallinger, totaled 9243 in 1942; 11,093 in 1943; 9190 in 1944; 7583 in 1945; 12,493 in 1946. Estimated admissions this year total 15,600, and next year, 18,500.

At the rapid treatment center in Gallinger Hospital, opened in July, 1943, case total were 2200.

In 1944, 2159 in 1945, and 1987 in 1946.

In its budget statement, the Health Department said "to reduce the morbidity rate of venereal disease, early adequate treatment is required.

Estimated District expenses for the patients at St. Elizabeths were $535,000 and for those at Gallinger, $98,000, a total of $633,000.

public health nurses, and there are 75 in the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, but by standards of the American Public Health Association, the city should have 350.

Of the 60 nurses 31 would fill positions which were eliminated by money cuts in the last two years. They would be assigned this way: Tuberculosis, 20; school service, 20; maternal and child welfare, 15, and mental hygiene, 5.

In asking additional TB nurses, the department said the District's six-month chest X-ray survey starting in January is expected to give the city a total lead of 6000 TB cases. It added:

"Intensive work will be required with these cases for a period of two years after the survey; especially since the number of institutional beds for such patients is limited and many of them will need to be cared for in their own homes."

In asking 20 more nurses for the school service, the department said:

"In the schools where children are gathered daily and under control, there is a magnificent field for teaching the principles of personal hygiene and bringing to light defects which may be corrected before they become serious. In no year has the nursing service been able to have corrected more than one-fifth to one-third of the defects found during that year by the medical inspectors.

"Therefore, there is a tremendous backlog of children with defects who need instruction and referral to medical facilities.

"Although it is recognized that the class room teacher should take a more active part in daily classroom screening for communicable disease and defects, yet there is a tremendous amount of work to be done by the nurses with those children having serious defects and whose parents, as well as the children, need help in the solution of their problems."

Besides the new employes, the budget called for transferring nine city health employes from the Federal to the District payroll. This recommendation was made as a result of United States Public Health Service criticism against charging 44 per cent of the District's Federal health funds to administration.

Among the new employes would be two dental teams of three persons each to give florine treatments for tooth decay to an estimated 6000 children a year. One team would work in the white schools and the other in the Negro schools, giving treatments to small children only.

Money was asked for 12 more food inspectors, two of them to fill jobs that had been cut out for lack of money in the last two years. The Department said most outbreaks of food poisoning here in recent years had been traced to employe illness or improper food handling. "Many of these outbreaks could have been avoided if more frequent inspections had been made," the Department said. With 36 inspectors now at work, the Department said it needed 25 more but was asking only for 12 more.

Another request called for hiring five technicians to increase from 50 to 100 the number of children receiving treatment for cerebral palsy. This ailment affects an estimated 1200 children in the district of which one-third could be developed into self-sustaining citizens by special treatment. The Department estimated 100 need the publicly furnished service.

District health officials said that even though the new cancer control bureau was not listed as a separate item in the budget plan, it would still operate as a separate bureau. Cancer funds totaling about $46,000 were included in other bureau budgets.

Money was also asked for 5 more rat-control workers and for 13 more sanitary inspectors. The larger rat-control staff would be assigned to an extenrmination program for commercial and industrial buildings here.

Money was asked to hire 9 field investigators to go after venereal disease contacts reported by patients in the clinics. The District now pays for one investigator. Eight others are paid with Federal money, but that help is slated to be withdrawn next year.

Following is a breakdown of the health appropriation for this year and the budget proposals for next year for various Health Department activities:

Ruhland Sees Pay Inequity, Seeks $14,000

District Health Officer George G. Ruhland declared yesterday that it wasn't right for his salary to be $10,000 while School Superintendent Hobart M. Corning gets $14,000.

Dr. Ruhland wants $14,000 a year for himself, and a new $12,000 annual salary for Assistant Health Officer Daniel L. Seekinger, whose salary this year is $9377.

Not only does Dr. Ruhland dislike having $4000 a year less than Dr. Corning; he also thinks it unfair that he gets less than one of his subordinates, Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, superintendent of the big municipal hospital, Gallinger. Dr. Sweeney's salary is $11,475.

This all came out yesterday in Dr. Ruhland's request to the District Commissioners for a $2,817,829 budget to run the Health Department for the year beginning next July 1.

Dr. Corning, in charge of Washington's schools since March 1946, get his present salary fixed in the new teachers' pay act this year. The move to make him the highest paid city official was sparked by Board of Education officials who appealed directly to Congress for Corning's new salary.

Dr. Ruhland, District Health Officer since 1935, faces a lonelier, steeper climb to the salary he wants. The District Commissioners, with their $10,000 salaries, make the first decision on whether Dr. Ruhland's request for a pay boost is to go into the official budget requests that go to the Capital next January.

Unsolved Crimes Jump

better record on solution of cases than the average for all cities over 250,000.

But for the first half of 1947, Washington reported the worst crime record it has had in at least five years. As case solutions went down, number of crimes went up.

This record was brought out only after The Washington Post exposed the police department's practice of "pocketing" cases of crime. This expose resulted in a request by the Police Department for a check by the FBI of its crime reporting methods.

The FBI made its own count of crimes reported during the first six months of 1947, producing the startling figures.

Reasons Not Determined

How much Washington's startling increase in crime and the reduction in cases solved is due to the police methods of reporting crimes, and how much to an actual change in crime statistics, cannot be determined. The wide difference in crime statistics for this year and those for preceding years is shown by these statistics:

Percentage of murder cases closed between 1942 and 1946 ranged from 93.9 per cent in 1945 to 112.5 in 1942.

Percentage of assault cases closed within that period ranged from a low of 87.7 per cent in 1942 to a high of 102.5 per cent in 1944.

Percentage of cases of grand larceny cleared off the books was lowest in 1942, when the percentage was 42.8, and highest in 1943, with 53.2 per cent.

Burglary Cases Cleared

Percentage of cases of burglary cleared during the period varied from 43.8 per cent in 1942 to a high of 60.4 per cent in 1944.

Percentage of robbery cases cleared was low at 56.6 per cent in 1942 and high at 99.3 per cent in 1944.

Percentage of auto theft cases cleared was low at 91.9 per cent in 1942 and high at 96.3 per cent in 1944.

Better Than U. S. Average

For the calendar year 1946, Washington's crime solution record was better than the national average for cities of comparable size, as reported by the FBI. National average figures for the first six months of 1947 are not available. Last year's comparable figures follow:

Washington solved 97.6 per cent of its murders; the average for comparable cities was 87.3. Washington solved80.5 per cent of its robberies;the average was 38.5. Washington solved 93.2 per cent of its assault cases; the average was 75.7 per cent. Washington solved 56.3 per cent of its burglaries; the average was 30.8 per cent.

Washington solved 42.2 per cent of its larcenies; the average was 23.6 per cent. Washington solved 95.8 per cent of its auto thefts; the average was 30.3 per cent.

District Commissioners, appraised of the startling nature of Washington's latest crime statistics, attributed the Capital's crime problem to insufficient police personnel.

Every Chief Asks Increase

Commissioner Guy Mason declared: "You can only do so much with so many men." He said every recent police chief has asked for an increase in personnel; but that even those additional police jobs allowed by Congress during the war could not be filled, and that vacancies had piled up. Mason said he had "fullest confidence" in Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young described the police problem as "a very grave situation." He declared that the police force has been limited in personnel, and that its strength today is very little greater than it was in 1940, although during that period, Washington has had a 40 per cent increase in population.

"Certainly one line of attack on the problem should be another attempt to persuade Congress to bring the force up to necessary strength."

Air Policy Chief to Act in Developing Cargo Rate Battle

The No. 1 man on President Truman's Air Policy Commission yesterday declared his intention to step into a situation shaping up as a rate war between scheduled, mail-carrying air lines and independent air freight carriers.

Slick

The impending battle over air cargo business has been brewing for some time. It came fully into the open as Thomas K. Finletter, chairman of the temporary body appointed to recommend a new national air policy, discussed it with top men in the Independent Airfreight Association.

Earl F. Slick of San Antonio, Tex., president of Slick Airways and of the association, told the commission at a hearing that he did not believe the independents would be in business six months more if the Civil Aeronautics Board permitted new rates proposed by some airlines to go into effect next month.

The proposed charges, covering specified commodities between certain points, average about 12 cents a ton-mile, as compared with the independent's rate average of 13 cents and with the 20-cent average adopted by the air lines generally August 1.

Finletter said he hoped the CAB was aware of this situation, and H. Struve Hensel, counsel for the independents, commented that he thought the Presidential commission could go to the board if it wished.

D. C. Plans to Cut Hospital Day Rate

The Budget Bureau is planning to make a sharp reduction in the proposed $17 per day rate which Freedmen's Hospital could charge the District for charity patients.

A spokesman said yesterday the new rate would probably be fixed this week. He would give no estimate, but said the new rate would represent "quite a downward revision" from the $17 figure. The present rate, however, is $9.25 a day.

3 British Polar Explorers Lost In Antarctic

London, Sept. 22 (AP).—An airplane carrying three British explorers disappeared September 15 on a flight to establish a weather observation base in an uncharted section of Graham Land peninsula in the Antarctic, the Colonial Office announced today.

A sledging party was flown to the area and another party has started overland to search for the missing men, who carried rations for 10 days, the announcement said.

The plane left a British base at Marquerite Bay. Radio contact was lost when the aircraft neared a prospective depot on the site of the east side of Graham land. The British plane expected to land and receive supplies September 18 from planes dispatched by a United States expedition headed by Comdr. Finn Ronne, but the Colonial Office said that U. S. search planes had been unable to locate the aircraft.

U. S. Airport Balances Books

National Airport, one of the world's largest and the only commercial field owned by the Government, has balanced it financial books.

Showing $3,556,115 in revenue in its six years of operation, the field has had $3,620,431 in Congretional appropriations for expenses. Revenues for the 1947 fiscal yeafr, already totaling $841,381 with some receipts still outstanding, will push income over the appropriation figure.

Principal source of the airport's income is rental. This is expected to increase with completion of five new hangars by early next summer.

The 10-cent turnstiles on the observation deck have taken in about $35,000 per year, Manager Bennett Griffin's report to the civil Aeronautics Administration disclosed.

The airport showed a profit in 1942, 1945 and 1946.

Suit Opposes Freight Car Rent Increase

District Court yesterday was asked to enjoin the Interstate Commerce Commission from raising rental rates on freight cars from $1.50 to $2 a day.

The injunction move, filed in behalf of 43 of the Nation's key railroads, was aimed at an ICC order effective October 1. Argument in the suit will be heard Friday by Associate Justice F. Dickenson Letts of District Court, and Associate Justices G. Barrett Prettyman and Bennett Champ Clark of the United States Court of Appeals.

The suit charged that the order was "arbitrary" and that it exceeded the authority of the ICC in that it established not a "compensatory" rate but one so high as to be construed as a "penalty."

The ICC order, issued on July 25, was, according to a Commission report, calculated to increase the efficiency and economical use of the available freight car supply.

The suit asserted further that the ICC order especially affects many small railroads that own no freight cars and must rent them from larger lines.

Among the complaining railroads are the Baltimore and Ohio, the New York Central, the Southern, Pacific and the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

Bureau Plans To Start School Of Metrology

Establishment of a Bureau of Standards school of metrology next spring to train the nation's weights and measures officials was announced yesterday by Dr. E. U. Condon, director of the bureau.

He also told the assembled 250 weights and measures men from over the U. S. of plans for a collection of data pertaining to weights and measures in other countries.

Another future project is revision of the bureau's 21-year-old handbook on Federal and State weights and measures laws, and the addition of a case book of legal decisions and opinions in the weights meausures field. Also planned is a complete file on State and local specifications and regulations.

The conference closes Thursday.

Not Appreciated

Representative Harold Youngblood's first reaction to the collapse of his case against a local restaurant proprietor charged with selling him a sandwich containing spoiled chicken was that he would resign from the House District Subcommittee of Education and Health. Judge Armond Scott concluded that the charges against the restaurant proprietor had not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt. But Congressman Youngblood chose to regard the verdict as lack of support for him in his capacity as legislator or town councilman for the District. His second reaction was that District judges should be elected. It is difficult to avoid the implication, although of course the Congressman did not put it that way, that he believes the District ought to have judges who would be specially impressed by Congressmen's charges whether or not they could be proved beyond a reasonable doubt.

In any event, Mr. Youngblood has let it be known that he will not devote his precious time to District affairs if the people do not appreciate it. His attitude reminds us of the old-fashioned conquerors who wanted the people to bow and scrape when they passed. A little imagination would enable the Michigander to understand that the people of the disfranchised Capital did not ask him to serve them and that they are quite indifferent to his threat to give himself back to Detroit. And a slight acquaintance with the spirit of democracy might enable him to understand that the District is asking for political servants of its own choosing—not young masters who come from distant cities with the vain expectation of being "appreciated."

Banning Propaganda

The resolution proposed to the General Assembly by Russia is what Dean Swift would no doubt have called a modest proposal: acceptance of it by this country would require nothing more than a total subversion of our political system. Under the terms of the resolution, the members of the United Nations would be enjoined "on pain of criminal punishment to prohibit war propaganda in any form and take measures for the prevention and suppression of war propaganda as a socially dangerous activity threatening the vital interests and welfare of the peace-loving nations." What this means, of course, is something familiar enough to the Russians but altogether abhorrent to us—governmental control of speech and of the press.

One may set aside as of subsidiary significance the difficulty of defining the term "propaganda." We suppose that from the Soviet point of view it may be characterized as anything critical of or detrimental to Russian policy. The lengths to which the author of the resolution, Mr. Vishinsky, would go in suppressing freedom of expression was illustrated by his attack on Yale University because the Yale University Press (the publications of which are in no sense sponsored by the university) published a book in which a group of scientists expressed the view that "the most effective means of preventing war is the ability to launch atomic war literally in no time." Mr. Vishinsky considers this warmongering.

More fundamental, however, is Mr. Vishinsky's failure, whether willful or obtuse, to recognize the role of the unofficial utterance in a free society. It cannot be doubted that individuals and newspapers in the United States have been guilty of some extremely inflammatory and irresponsible utterances. But these are not, as Mr. Vishinsky ought by now to understand, representative of the opinion of the United States Government, as an expression in Pravda would be representative of the opinion of the Soviet government.

It is very easy to talk of suppressing war propaganda in the Soviet Union, where every expression of dissent from the official line is considered treason and every newspaper is an official mouthpiece. But it is not so easy in the United States, where the expression of individual views, however heterodox, is considered a fundamental freedom and where the press is considered an essential check upon the tyrannous extension of governmental authority. All of this was explained to Mr. Vishinsky with patience and clarity at the General Assembly a year ago by no less an authority than Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Soviet diplomat had made some extravagant charges to the effect that under the guise of freedom of expression propaganda hostile to the countries of origin was tolerated in the displaced persons camps. "We in the United States," Mrs. Roosevelt said, "tolerate opposition provided it does not extend to the point of advocacy of the overthrow of government by force. Unless the right of opposition is conceded, it seems to me that there is very little possibility that countries with differing conceptions of democracy can live together without friction in the same world." At the risk of being charged by Mr. Vishinsky with warmongering, we venture to note that Mrs. Roosevelt's observation is being fully vindicated.

Approach To Marshall

The long-awaited report of the Paris Cooperation Committee will be scrutinized carefully for evidence that it conforms to Secretary Marshall's request for "a cure and not a mere palliative" of European stagnation. In the nature of things judgment of the first document must be tentative. What is before the American people is only a summary of a report which is described as initial. In other words, it is the first of a series, and more reports from Cooperative Europe will be forthcoming as the cooperators pursue their quest for mutual help. An example is the possibility held out of a dovetailing of steel production for the common benefit. Moreover, reports from the technical committees are not yet ready. All that we have got so far is an outline which remains to be worked out in Paris. Perhaps, indeed, it will be completed in common with the Committee of Nineteen under the chairmanship of Secretary Harriman.

We are disappointed that the initial report is deficient in a statement of principles. The Paris cooperators make no declaration of interdependence—a declaration which would have provided them with a goal and an inspiration. It is our firm conviction that in spite of centuries of separatism, a will to European unity is to be found in the hearts of the common people of Europe. Such an aspiration, if it had been expressed in this document, would have made a powerful impression, moreover, among the American people. There is another lack in the summary of the initial report of Cooperative Europe. It comes under the head of administration. Any approach to an integrated economy of Europe requires an organization of European scope armed with powers to allocate both European production and American imports to the projects catering to European reconstruction. We have ourselves thought in terms of a Peace Production Board. Men of the caliber of Lord Beveridge and Sir Arthur Salter, possessed of the same vision as Mr. Stassen, have sponsored the same idea, and have given it the name of a Central Development Agency.

Notwithstanding these omissions a start has been made, and enough has been accomplished to warrant hope of improvement. The document has caught something of the spirit of the Marshall approach. The Secretary of State had in mind self-help and mutual help—self-help in producing more of the right things needed for European reconstruction, mutual help in correlating this production. The list of prime necessities for Europe comprises food, fuel and power and steel. Production targets are set by the participating nations in these and other products, and collective action is pledged in developing such potential resources as the hydro-electric possibilities of the Alps. A limited customs union is an aim which is to be pursued in study groups and negotiations. The item about the correlation of Europe's steel industry, though vague, nevertheless appears to be the thin end of the wedge of integrated economies. This is some approach, though a skimpy one, to the Marshall request for a program for the restoration of a working economy for Europe.

When a program is finally put together, the deficiencies of Europe in realizing it will be laid before Congress, together with the bill. Europe needs a host of materials for stimulating the output of essential products. Fertilizer, tractors and agricultural machinery for the farmlands; mining machinery, locomotives and wagons for the mines and steelworks; electrical generators for power plants—these are some of those materials. On top of everything Europe needs food. Europeans cannot be expected to put their resources in full employment unless they are fed. And it so happens that, as a result of unparalleled bad weather, they are going into the winter with a 50 per cent fall in the general harvest. The deficit in fulfilling the program is put at 22 billion dollars, including six billion dollars for financing purchases from other American countries than the United States. It would be a grand and historic undertaking to see the New World act in concert to save the Old World from economic catastrophe.

That Certain Something

If a keen intellect, unremitting industry and a real grasp of the Nation's problems were the sole qualifications needed to make a good President, Senator Taft would rank high on the list of aspirants for the Republican presidential nomination. However, the ability of a candidate for the highest elective office to influence people and attract votes calls for more than purely intellectual attainments. He should have in addition that certain something vaguely characterized as personal charm as well as ability to meet people on an easy footing. Otherwise he is a bad bet from the viewpoint of party leaders who judge a candidate's suitability for the presidential nomination largely with reference to his vote-getting powers.

The general impression that Senator Taft lacks those intangible qualities of personal appeal that may spell the difference between victory and defeat in a presidential contest is strengthened by reports coming out of the West. Union picketing of places where Taft meetings have been held might conceivably be regarded as an aid rather than a hindrance to his candidacy, on the assumption that such antilabor law demonstrations will rally to his support more voters than are alienated. But in our opinion his chances of nomination are definitely injured by these evidences of labor hostility.

Much more significant than such overt manifestations of dislike, however, is the general public indifference toward him. Robert C. Albright, our experienced reporter who is traveling with Mr. Taft, writes that, except for picketing, Californians hardly knew the Senator was in the State. Indeed, groups of sightseers passed by him at Hoover Dam without so much as glancing in his direction.

Mr. Albright is no doubt right in attributing this public unawareness in part to Mr. Taft's complete lack of showmanship. Unfortunately for him, the politician devoid of showmanship is seriously handicapped as a candidate for elective office. Only too often showmanship has won over intellectual qualities in our presidential elections. Deploring the fact serves no purpose; it simply has to be recognized as one of the factors to be taken into account in picking party nominees. The cautious way in which Mr. Taft has tested public sentiment toward his candidacy indicates that he is aware of his limitations. It would not be surprising if he should return from his Western tour leaving his presidential ambitions behind him.

Make It Bipartisan

President Truman is reported to have taken a "show me" stand toward the proposals for a special session of Congress to provide emergency relief for Europe. This attitude he shares with many Republican leaders in Congress. It is an attitude that is rooted in politics. President Truman knows that there are political hazards in a special session of Congress. Perhaps he remembers the special session called by President Wilson in 1919 which brought havoc to his policies and ended with the Senate's rejection of the Versailles Treaty. Nothing will be lost by candidly recognizing these political hazards, although, for that matter, similar hazards will be encountered in the regular session that will assemble in January.

Even if the argument is kept on a political basis, however, these hazards must be balanced against the hazards of inaction. We think the critical nature of the food problem in Europe has been established beyond question. If this country is to afford the democratic peoples of Europe even partial relief, action must be taken quickly. Controls to prevent the feeding to livestock of wheat that is desperately needed for human beings must obviously be set in motion before the wheat is consumed. Legislation in January would be too late. If we should belatedly try to answer the hunger call from our neighbors at that time, without having prudently applied the necessary controls, the effect upon our gyrating price structure might be disastrous. We cannot help thinking that this grave risk overshadows any risk of political disadvantage that the President might encounter by meeting the problem head-on in an extra session.

The best procedure, in our opinion, is not to shrink from the problem but to embrace it in a way that will minimize the dangers involved. The President can readily do this by sharing his responsibility with the leaders of Congress. We must remember that the real objective is not merely to get Congress back into session but to secure the enactment of legislation that will save our European allies from slipping into economic chaos and perhaps anarchy. If the session were to produce an open split between the President and Congress leading to an impasse, certainly it would be better not to call it. But that danger can be greatly minimized by candid discussions at the White House and possibly agreement between leaders in the executive and legislative branches on what type of program should be presented.

Whatever the program is to be, it ought to have bipartisan support. That is particularly true of the steps to be taken to implement the long-range Marshall Plan. A reconstruction program that might not outlast the 1948 elections would be worth little. It follows, in our opinion, that this whole matter ought to be worked out in consultation among the President and leaders of Congress. Let the responsibility for the joint session be shared. Let responsibility for the main outlines of the policy be shared. If we are going to pursue a bipartisan policy, which is imperative for its success under present circumstances, we think it should be genuinely bipartisan. And that means it should be shaped and sponsored in a manner that will not invite partisan controversy.

I SAW THE NIGHT

I saw the night come down
From out a winter sky
Black with low-hung cloud;
It reached dark arms
And clasped the quiet leafless wood;
It reached again and to its heart
Held close the waiting field of sedge,
Then wood and sky and field
Were one with night.

Wasteful Trend

Those of us who hear Dr. Davies' sermons regularly were pleased to see some mention of his most serious and excellent sermon of yesterday in The Washington Post. I refer to the article of your issue of September 15 which states, "The Rev. A. Powell Davies said that the new styles featuring longer skirts are immoral 'because they waste material that is desperately needed' . . ."

Most people will agree that Dr. Davies' point regarding the new fashions was well taken, but the principal thought of the minister's remarks was even more important than his conception of this wasteful frivolity.

After elaborating on the difficulties of fighting half-truths, Dr. Davies pointed out some current apparent truths that have led the public astray. One notable such deception was the widely believed idea that the end of price controls and rationing would not lead the country into an inflation-depression cycle. Now, after prices have soared, it is evident that the public has believed a lie, even though it was an unintentional untruth. From remarks to this effect Dr. Davies turned to an illustration of America's habit of following leadership and pattern-setting. He pointed out that buyers' strikes were distressing the clothing industry early this year, and that new styles of drastically different cut were the only means of tricking American women (the only women in the world able to buy) into paying the high prices. Then it was that he said the new clothes were immoral, as they wasted material badly needed by the shivering people of Europe.

It was suggested in the course of the now-famous illustration that American women might be able to stop the wasteful trend toward voluminous skirts. Women's organizations might find their efforts ineffectual in the face of millions of sheeplike women shoppers, but they can try! It is to be hoped that women's clubs of social, political and educational natures will take up the issue and act rationally upon it. There should not be one of us who would rather have the "new look" than the knowledge that some woman and child abroad are warm and safe.

Government Wages

Why workers must strike is illustrated by the hapless position of the largest group of underpaid workers, the employes of Uncle Sam.

Denied the right to strike, they must depend upon the "understanding" of Congress to keep their wages abreast of prices. Uncle Sam is the world's largest employer and theoretically should set an example. But how this works out is shown by the fact that while most classes of union workers have had several raises to meet the increased cost of living since the death of the OPA, Government employes have had none.

The reason given is that the cost is too much, that it is "inflationary," or that two million employes is too many. The number of employes is controlled by Congress, and has been enlarged by Congress. Why penalize the employes for Congress' mistakes?

While it is agreed that Government employes should not have the power to strike, non-Government workers can see by their example, just how impotent any group of workers is without the strike. Voluntary wage increases are just not made, because employers still take the mistaken view that wages constitute "cost."

"No Children" Rule

It is not news to anyone by now that there is a housing shortage in Washington, and that a family must reckon with a considerable waiting period before finding suitable accommodation is to be expected and, of course, borne with patience.

There is one aspect in connection with the housing situation, however, in regard to which it would appear well to take up the cudgels by every possible means, in order that what has become a strange attitude on the part of those who have apartments and houses to rent, may be combated so far as possible. I refer to the "no children" injunction.

A secretary of this legation with a well-disciplined girl of eight years, the latter at school most of the day and away at camp all summer, in more than ten months of searching has been unable to find an unfurnished apartment or house. The pity of it is that there would have been several occasions when an apartment would have been available for her if she did not have a child. Is this really the predominant attitude of those in a position to rent accommodation in this great city?

Special Session

I see in the headlines where Stassen is requesting President Truman to call a special session of Congress to aid Europe. What does Stassen think we have been doing for the past couple of years or more?

Does Europe need clothing? Perhaps, but we have already seen numerous boatloads collected by churches and charitable organizations. Does Europe need meat? Perhaps, but we have already sent so much that it seems we will soon have to go to Europe to get a steak. Does Europe need grain? Perhaps, but according to newspaper accounts millions of tons are exchanged between European nations. Does Europe need coal? Perhaps, but some of the finest coal mines in the world are to be found in England, Silesia, eastern France and western Germany, all of which have sufficient machines and manpower to remove it.

So it looks to me that Stassen, with an eye on 1948, wants to act as a crusader in European conflicts, and wants good old Uncle Sam to stick out his neck just a little further in the manifold political contests of Europe.

There is no need for any special session for some more special European meddling.

If we really are interested in "helping" Europe, we will keep our shiploads of commodities and our billions of dollars at home. This will be the quickest and best way to get them to stop loafing and get to work. Too much "crying on the shoulders" of the "less fortunates" and the stuffing of money in their pockets can only serve to make loafers and ingrates of them, as such treatment invariably causes them to feel that, "the world owes them a living and they are fools to work for it if "suckers" are willing to foot the bill.

Marshall's Appointments

In The Washington Post, September 13, Mr. Drew Pearson said: "While Marshall has leaned over backward to accept the civilian viewpoint, it's also a fact that more and more colonels and generals have entered his department."

There followed a list of 11 names of department officials, giving their military titles, together with the names of five "Ambassadors and Ministers appointed from the military ranks."

In view of the innuendo of the article, which is to the obvious effect that Secretary Marshall is militarizing the State Department, it may be of interest to examine the backgrounds of the gentlemen whose names are listed.

Of the 11 departmental officials, it happens that only two are professional soldiers and that most of them joined the department when Mr. Byrnes was Secretary. Here is the list:

General Crain is a professional soldier, appointed by Mr. Byrnes. A former ordnance officer, the Register of the Department of State lists him as deputy chairman of the Policy Committee on Arms and Armaments.

General Snow is a New Hampshire lawyer, who served in both wars. Not a professional soldier, he is entitled by statute, along with most of the others, to use the military title. 10 U.S.C. 1028b. Mr. Byrnes brought him into the department.

Colonel Gross, now the legal adviser, is a civilian who served in the war; before that time he had been associate general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board and before then associate counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers. First appointed by Secretary Byrnes.

Colonels Hummelsine, Ruck, Chapman and Eddy were educators. None is a professional soldier and all four came into the department under Mr. Byrnes.

Colonel Orear and Major McCoy, neither of them are or were professional soldiers.

General Saltzman, a graduate of West Point, served five years as a lieutenant in the Regular Army, after which he resigned and was in civilian business for ten years before being called into Federal service as a National Guardsman in 1940. In the circumstances it would be difficult to classify him as a professional soldier.

That leaves only one out of the 11, Colonel Carter, a professional soldier brought into the department by Secretary Marshall—to continue as his personal assistant, as he had been in China.

Of the five Ambassadors and Ministers, General Holcomb was appointed during the administration of Secretary Hull (and President Roosevelt), while Admiral Kirk and Generals Bedell Smith and Hines were appointed during Secretary Byrnes' incumbency. (General Hines, a Regular Army officer for 20 years, had been Veterans' Administrator for almost 22 years.) That leaves General Wedemeyer, formerly commanding the China theater, as the only one appointed by Secretary Marshall—to be special envoy to China.

In other words, only two of the 16 named by Mr. Pearson were professional soldiers who were brought into the State Department by Secretary Marshall. Of these, as noted, one continued as the Secretary's personal assistant and the other was sent as a special envoy to a country with which he was uniquely familiar.

Question: Is it fair or accurate, on the basis of such data, to insinuate that Secretary Marshall is militarizing the State Department?

Reluctant Leadership

ATHENS, GREECE.—Anyone here even a brief time can learn how absurd are the Russian charges that the United States is seeking to dominate Greece. No invader in all the centuries of turbulent Greek history ever came with less of the idea of domination.

One handicap may be that we are too reluctant to take the leadership in straightening out the Greek tangle. Greek politicians expected something like that to happen. They were prepared to relax and enjoy it.

Now they are puzzled and perhaps even irritated because of the American reluctance to use a strong hand. They complain that Aid Director Dwight Griswold does not tell them what they should do.

The only thing resembling intervention thus far is the insistence of the Americans on broadening the base of the Greek government. That was wholly in the interest of democracy and representation of the mass of the people. Even that was done tentatively and after long hesitation.

It is almost enough to refute the Russian charge before the U. N. to say that the Communist Party operates openly here in Athens. A Communist paper is published daily, and daily is full of denunciations of Griswold and the American aid mission. Griswold has been urged to curtail this freedom and perhaps suppress the extreme left-wing papers, but he has steadfastly refused to do so.

IN THE country outside Athens the situation is different. There known Communist sympathizers are likely to be arrested by government police or attacked by armed bands of the right. This is a phase of the bitter feud that in the north takes the form of open civil war.

The violence and lawlessness of the extreme right existed long before the United States mission arrived. One objective of the mission is to get the situation under control, but that is extremely difficult when law and order are largely nonexistent in most of the country.

But the important fact is that peace and the restoration of democracy are the main objectives of American intervention. This fact is evident to anyone who looks objectively at our undertaking in Greece to date. It makes laughable the charges of American imperialism and the rest of the jargon spouted by Andrei Vishinsky before the United Nations Assembly.

We may bungle the job here. If we fail, the reason will be precisely because we have not intervened with sufficient force and determination. Our own irresolution in this unprecedented adventure in foreign policy is in itself a refutation of the Russian charges.

Anyone less like a dictator and imperialist than Griswold would be hard to find. Communist propagandists indulge in silly fabrications when they try to make him out a gauleiter. His attitude is typically American in that he would like to do a practical job and then get out and leave the country to decide its own fate in a democratic way.

One tragic mistake here was to cut down the United States information service just at the moment that the American mission began to operate. Because of the short-sightedness of Congress, the information service in Greece has been reduced to almost nothing. While the mission is trying to take over the function in part, this is a serious lack at a time when it is needed.

The United States has a story to tell that is not propaganda. It is the story of the success of a system which spreads real benefits very widely and yet has kept free choice for the individual. The facts speak far louder than the noisy jargon of world communism. Our reluctance to tell the world of our intentions, and how we are going about carrying them out, is a grave handicap. It leaves a vacuum that the Russians are only too eager to try it fill.

The Greeks themselves are deeply democratic. The Metaxas dictatorship in the late 30s sought to impose the paraphernalia of fascism. But it was never more than skin deep. The resourceful Greek found subtle ways of burlesquing songs, salutes and other mumbo-jumbo of the dictator.

The Germans, with all their boasted efficiency, would do very little about subjugating the Greek people. Revolt, both concealed and open, constantly grew during the years of occupation. Finally the Germans gave up even trying to keep controls in the countryside.

Even if we had such aims, it would be stupid folly to impose any arbitrary system on Greece. An important segment of Greek Communists are Greeks first and Stalinist Communists only second or third. These are facts that cannot be obscured no matter how loud the propaganda that emanates from Moscow.

"Moore's 88th"

Having been irked several times in the past by newspaper comments concerning the armed forces, allow me to offer my congratulations and sincere thanks for your editorial of September 18 on the Eighty-eighth Division.

No one in the regular service needed an introduction to the Eighty-eighth Division or to Maj. Gen. Bryant E. Moore. The ability of the latter as a troop leader is a well known factor. Your editorial will, however, provide the citizen with a limited view of activities and problems of the peacetime service.

Reporting such as this is certainly a better means of keeping the public informed concerning the activities of the armed forces than the usual malicious attack of our military leaders by uninformed columnists.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Cold War X

IT MAY be that the Soviet Union, though committed in principle, will not in fact agree to a settlement which means the evacuation of Europe. If her purpose is the domination of Europe and of a large part of the world, she will never agree. For the military evacuation of continental Europe would not be one of those "tactical maneuvers" against which, quite rightly, Mr. X tells us to be on guard.

Lippmann

It would be a strategic change in the balance of power. For once the Red Army had been withdrawn behind the frontiers of the Soviet Union, it could not reenter Europe without committing an obvious act of military aggression, which would precipitate a general war. The pressure of the Soviets upon Europe by propaganda and infiltration would continue, but that pressure would no longer be backed up by overwhelming military power throughout eastern Europe and by the threat of military intervention in western Europe. Though Tito's army, and perhaps the Polish army, assuming them to be satellites of Moscow, could exert considerable military pressure locally on the neighboring states, they are not capable of conquering and dominating Europe except as contingents of the Red Army.

If the Kremlin really means to dominate Europe, it will not withdraw its armies which are half-way across Europe. Standing on the Elbe line in the middle of Europe and Austria, and on the vulnerable frontier of Italy, the Kremlin is in a far better position to advance farther west than it can be if it withdraws and stands on its own frontiers. The withdrawal of the army is, therefore, the acid test of Soviet conduct and purpose, incomparably clearer, more definite, more practical than whether or not they observe the Yalta Declaration in countries liberated from the Nazis but still occupied by the Red Army. Verbal agreements like the Yalta Declaration and the Atlantic Charter can be made the subject of endless tactical maneuvering. For agreements of this kind do not change the balance of power. But the evacuation of a continent would change the balance of power.

The Kremlin will understand this, and we must expect it to exact the highest price it can obtain for what would be a deep reduction of its present power and influence in Europe, or, if it means to conquer Europe, to obstruct any settlement which meant that the Russian armies must evacuate Europe.

WE SHALL in either case have clarified the real issue. Instead of seeking "to contain" the Soviet Union all over the Eurasian continent, we shall have the initiative and a definite and concrete objective: at the best we shall know the terms on which the main conflict can be settled; at the worst the Soviet Union will have shown its hand on an issue—the liberation of Europe from non-European armies—where there will be no doubt whatever that our cause is just, and that we are the champions of freedom, and that the great masses of the people of Europe will be with us because we stand for the very thing which only traitors can oppose.

We shall have written off the liabilities of the Truman Doctrine which must in practice mean inexorably an unending intervention in all the countries that are supposed to "contain" the Soviet Union. We shall be acting once more in the great American tradition which is to foster the independence of other countries, not to use other countries as the satellites of our own power however beneficent, and as the instruments of our own policy, however well meant. Our aim will not be to organize an ideological crusade. It will not be to make Jeffersonian democrats out of the peasants of eastern Europe, the tribal chieftains, the feudal lords, the pashas, and the warlords of the Middle East and Asia, but to settle the war and to restore the independence of the nations of Europe by removing the alien armies—all of them, our own included.

WE SHALL have a diplomatic policy that it would be exceedingly difficult for the cleverest propagandist to misrepresent. For everyone can understand such a policy. Practically everyone will wish us to succeed in it. For alien armies are hateful, however well behaved, just because they represent an alien power and are, therefore, a perpetual reminder that the people on whom they are quartered are not masters of their own destiny.

Alien armies are, however, never well behaved: invariably they become corrupted. Thus we may count confidently upon a mounting popular support if we make it our mission to emancipate the ancient and proud continent of Europe from the military control of non-European powers. We shall be drawing upon the elemental and unifying passion of patriotism in Europe which, when it is aroused, is a much stronger passion than factionalism or any ideology.

THE EVACUATION of Europe can be accomplished only if we can negotiate, sign, and ratify a treaty of peace for Germany and for Austria to which the Soviet government is a party. For the peace treaties about eastern Europe, which is between Germany and Russia, cannot become effective until there are German and Austrian treaties. The Red Army will remain in eastern Europe as long as it remains in Germany and in Austria.

We must turn then to the problem of Germany, and how that problem is defined if we adhere to the Truman Doctrine and how, if we adopt the alternate policy for which I have been contending.

Secretary Marshall's Plan

THE PROPOSAL advanced by Secretary Marshall for the strengthening of the United Nations General Assembly brings us face to face with a fundamental question in international life.

NOVER

That question is whether and to what extent world public opinion, when properly mobilized, can serve as an effective substitute for physical force in the maintenance of world peace.

Under the Charter, the General Assembly, which General Marshall would keep in session continuously rather than once a year, cannot enforce its resolutions and recommendations. It can talk but not act. It is a town meeting, not a policeman on the beat.

The power to enforce the will of the United Nations is reserved, under the Charter, to the Security Council.

THAT BODY, says Article 24, is endowed with "primary responsibility for the maintenance of international peace and security."

Under Article 41 it can exercise that responsibility by ordering the "complete or partial interruption of economic relations and of rail, sea, air, postal telegraphic, radio, and other means of communication, and the severance of diplomatic relations."

It can go further. Under Article 42, "it may take such action by air, sea or land forces as may be necessary to maintain or restore international peace and security."

"Such action," Article 42 goes on to say, "may include demonstrations, blockades, and other operations by air, sea, or land forces of members of the United Nations."

The exercise of these and other powers of the Security Council is subject to the Big Five veto. As a result of this veto, as employed again and again by Soviet Russia, what was designed to be the most powerful of United Nations organs has become the most helpless and futile.

ON THE OTHER hand, the General Assembly, in which all members of the United Nations are represented and in which the great power veto does not obtain, has lived up to and surpassed expectations.

It has proved to be an effective world forum. To it the nations of the world have sent their ablest men. The level of its debate has, on the whole, been high.

The question remains whether, given the present Charter, it can be made into a truly effective instrument of peace.

To ask that question is not in any sense to disparage the force of world public opinion. That can be a powerful instrument for good. But its power is greatest in countries most eager to achieve effective world cooperation. It is least great in those lands, such as Russia, which live behind an iron curtain, where public opinion is manipulated rather than allowed freely to express itself, and which regard the U. N. as a propaganda platform rather than an instrument of peace.

World public opinion did not stop Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese militarists. We have no reason to believe it can of itself stop Russia.

IF THE General Assembly is, even in part, to fill the power vacuum created in the Security Council by the veto, some way must be found to put teeth into its resolutions and recommendations.

That cannot be done directly. It cannot be done through amendment of the Charter. Such amendment is only possible when all five permanent members of the Security Council (Russia, the United States, Great Britain, France and China) are in favor of a change. To state that fact is to demonstrate its impossibility.

Yet there is nothing in the Charter to prevent like-minded nations from convenanting to carry out the Assembly's recommendations.

They can do so under Article 51. It was this article, no doubt, which Warren R. Austin had in mind when, touching on the Greek problem in his reply to Vishinsky, he declared that:

"A majority of the United Nations has the power and authority within the Charter to take effective collective measures which they agree may be necessary for the defense of Greece."

The failure of the Council to live up to its duties and obligations as the U. N.'s enforcement agency need not mean the failure of the U. N. There is, fortunately, enough flexibility in the Charter, even as it stands, to make possible a strengthening of the organization to make it more effective.

Where there is a will, a way will be found. Secretary Marshall's plan, important in itself, is even more important because it represents a revolt against futility.

Military Diplomacy

By Sumner Welles

Wanted: A Political Instinct

IN HIS "American Memoir," which evokes such nostalgic memories of the age of confidence, Henry Seidel Canby speaks of "the marvelous political instinct of the British people."

With all of her occasional blind spots, such as Ireland, no modern power has shown a surer political instinct in comprehending the psychology of foreign people than Great Britain. Like so many of the other benefits we possessed during the age of confidence, that invaluable asset in the conduct of foreign relations seems to be vanishing.

However much Mr. Bevin may differ with Mr. Churchill upon every other conceivable subject, he surely agrees with him that American good will is essential if a genuine partnrship between the English-speaking nations is to be preserved. Yet Mr. Bevin would seem to lose no opportunity of alienating American sympathy and of provoking American antagonism.

The course which Mr. Bevin has pursued has shocked American public opinion. Indignation was caused by his indefensible reflections upon the Jewish citizens of New York. Now the American people have witnessed the pitiful odyssey of the steamship Exodus, and they have been revolted by the British government's obduracy in forcing the Jewish refugees she carried into concentration camps in the very country from whose horrors they had fled.

All of these events have aroused deep resentment among non-Jewish , as well as among Jewish elements in the United States. This resentment is making it increasingly difficult to maintain the intimate understanding between the two countries which is so necessary in this time of stress.

TO THIS disservice to Anglo-American relations must now he added Mr. Bevin's recent demands for the redistribution of the American gold reserves and for the enactment of some new form of lend-lease.

Statements such as these, made at the very moment when Britain must have additional help from the United States, have awakened congressional suspicions, renewed the memories of war debt irritations and started a wave of that old anti-British feeling which it was hoped had been permanently stilled.

Mr. Bevin seems to have little interest in American public opinion and no understanding of the factors by which American sentiment is motivated. He lacks political instinct in his conduct of foreign policy.

In this defect he is only surpassed by his Russian colleague, Mr. Molotov. That deft appreciation of the reactions of other peoples which marked Soviet policy in the days of Maxim Litvinov is no longer discernible.

AMERICAN Presidents and Secretaries of State have also all too often lacked this essential in their dealings with foreign peoples. It is a quality needed more than ever before as the United States undertakes for the first time to play a determined part in shaping the destinies of the world. There are few signs that our Government possesses it today.

The methods employed in our crude and much-vaunted interference in Greece's purely political affairs, however desireable our objectives may have been, have needlessly antagonized every sector of the Greek people.

The way in which we intervened in Paris while the Marshall Plan was being prepared has rapidly increased anti-American feeling in Europe. The comment of a European delegate, quoted by Frederic Kuh in a recent report, that Will Clayton gave the impression of being "a Southern plantation owner cracking the whip over a pack of hungry European sharecroppers," typifies the response of some of America's most loyal friends in western Europe.

The Administration's willingness to permit General Clay and his military advisers to operate as though Germany's neighbors had no right to seek security when plans for western Germany are formulated has seriously weakened the democratic parties in western Europe that are cooperating with this government.

What have been the results of General Wedemeyer's recent "diplomatic" survey of China, and of his published statement upon its conclusion? The Chinese Reds are proclaiming that his mission constituted flagrant proof of American intervention in China's sovereign affairs, and a dangerous rift has been created between Washington and the National government.

The military mentality predominates in Washington.

The debt of gratitude the American people owe their military leaders is immeasurable. But it must be admitted that with rare exceptions generals and admirals are not noted for their willingness to make allowances for the susceptibilities of other peoples.

There is an increasing tendency in our diplomacy to assume that, because the United States has the armed forces and the dollars upon which the safety and the recovery of other peoples presently depend, the right of these peoples to determine their own internal policies, and their right to be treated as sovereign equals, may be wholly disregarded.

WHAT IS needed in Washington is the knowledge that different peoples react differently to the same conditions; a willingness to allow for the sensibilities and even for the prejudices of other nations; and, most of all, that spirit of tolerance which comes from the realization that the American people and their Government are not omniscient. The combination of these qualities would make for a surer political instinct in the conduct of our foreign affairs.

Unless those now in charge of American foreign policy recognize the need for a basic change of attitude in their dealings with our democratic allies, we may well fail to achieve our national objectives.

Honeymoon Suite Picked in Windsor Castle

Windsor, England, Sept. 22 (U.P.). A honeymoon suite has been set aside in Windsor Castle for Princess Elizabeth and Lieut. Philip Mountbatten after their marriage November 20, it was learned today.

It was once the apartment of Victoria, Britain's last ruling queen, who reigned from 1837 to 1901.

The royal family has preserved the Victorian character of that portion of the mighty 900-year-old castle which is cvalled Victoria Tower. Elizabeth and Philip will begin their married life in much the same atmosphere as Victoria lived with her consort, Prince Albert.

The suite is on the first floor of the tower and is approached along dim, narrow corridors. Much of the furniture was chosen by Victoria herself. It is covered with cream-colored satin and embroidered with multicolored flowers and birds.

Main room of the suite is the music salon. It is connected to a lounge off which is located a smaller room suitable for the Princess' study.

A special wedding license for Princess Elizabeth, hand-written on white vellum, 26½ inches by 22 inches and bearing a $20 revenue stamp, was issued today by the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The license will be forwarded to King George tomorrow.

Cleric Fasts Tenth Day In Debt Plan

Conyers, Ga., Sept. 22 (U.P.).—The Rev. G. A. Gaines, superintendent of the Jolly Home of Homeless Children here, went without food for the tenth consecutive day today in a proposed 28-day fast that he hopes will bring divine help to pay off a $9000 debt on the home.

Gaines, who normally weighs 312 pounds and stands six feet, five inches tall, said:

"Whenever I've needed help in the past I've fasted, and there always came help. And there never was any doubt in my mind as to where it came from."

Gaines went about his duties as usual today. He fed 20 hogs, washed one of four horses at the home and graciously accepted a $10,000 dining hall for the home from an Atlanta broker.

"My hunger left me yesterday. I intend to fast until October 10, if it is necessary," he said. "I have lost 30 pounds in 10 days, eating nothing and drinking only water."

August Added 400,000 Jobs

By the United Press

The Nation's economic machine picked up 400,000 new industrial jobs in August, "right on schedule" to maintain full employment, the Labor Department said last night.

Ewan Clague, director, Bureau of Labor Statistics, said the number of non-farm employes hit a new 1947 peak last month, weekly earnings stayed around a record of $49.25, unemployment dropped, strikes are way down, home construction continued to rise and building employment neared 2,000,000 with the ceiling still unsighted.

He refused to say how long the favorable situation could be maintained, but he said a month ago that a 1947 depression was nowhere in sight.

British Consulate Stoned by Egyptians

Alexandria, Egypt, Sept. 22 (U.P.). Rioting Egyptians stoned the British consulate and two British-owned buildings today, demanding that the Union Jack be hauled down.

Premier Mahmoud Fahmy Nokrashy Pasha told a meeting of his Saadist Party in Cairo that his primary and immediate aim is to strengthen the Egyptian army "because words are powerless without action."

Hospital Care Declared Beyond Reach of Many

St. Louis, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—Hospital care is coming to be beyond the reach "of increasing numbers" of Americans, President John H. Hayes of the American Hospital Association said here today at the opening session of the 49th AHA convention.

Dr. V. M. Hoge, U. S. Public Health Service official, estimated that six billion dollars would have to be spent before full hospital service can be provided in this country.

Panel speakers, all spoke in opposition to compulsory Government health insurance.

Miss Jessie Turnbull, Pittsburgh, was chosen head of the American College of Hospital Administrators.

The Lisner a Drydock

Five Sailboats Moored on Stage

By Richard L. Coe

THIS COCKEYED WORLD: With the Nation's Capital crying aloud for a second playhouse, what a pity they've had to store sailboats on the stage of Lisner Auditorium . . . There have been five on the stage lately, but they've just been moved out to make room for some lecturers . . . Now George Washington University's sailing team is on the hunt again . . . There was room, by the way, for 20 more boats . . . It's not a very practical auditorium for plays and we once remarked that it seemed more like a hangar for a bomber squadron . . . Still, with two and three week runs at the National and a willing mass of potential theatergoers, we never expected to find an "institution of higher learning" turning its auditorium into a drydock.

ALSO COCKEYED is some of the movie trade press reaction to the British tax of 75 per cent on incoming American pictures . . . To read some of those bleats you'd think that Betty Grable is more vital than a loaf of bread . . . Granted, it's not a simple problem, but when you've only got so much money to spend, no matter how little you may have budgetcd for entertainment, when you've got to cut, entertainment naturally feels the knife . . . From this plastic tower it looks as though the half-world of reality and gloss which constitutes so many of our films has blurred the vision of some of the soothsayers . . . At the moment it appears that negotiations are off between our picture people and the Attlee government on a compromise . . . To block the Hollywood profits in Britain would be against terms of the loan, and a gentlemen's agreement to just let the profits pile up in Britain would only lead to trouble in a few years' time . . . As it is, Tommy British-er's reaction to no American films isn't clear because there's still a 10-month backlog . . . Next summer will tell the tale . . . Now Hollywood is waiting to see whether other countries will follow suit.

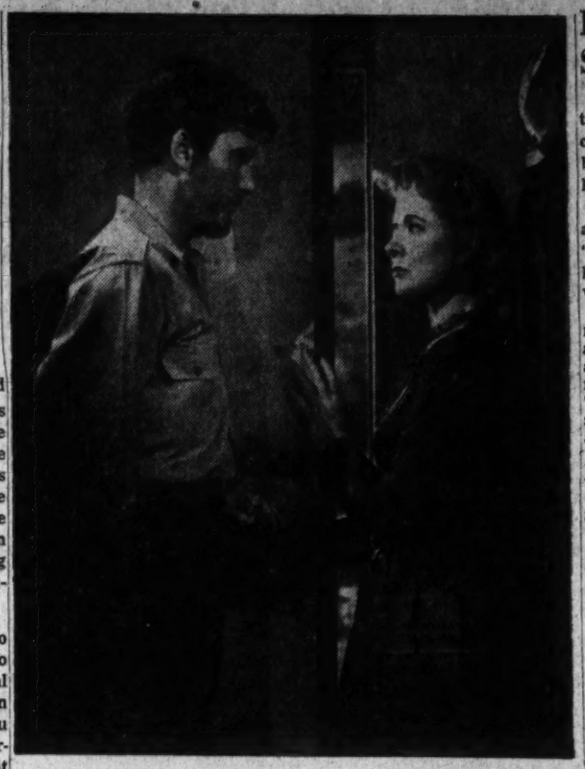
COCKEYED, too, was a stunt pulled yesterday by Joseph Hardy, Olney's leading man this summer . . . Joe's been writing letters, and he slipped the wrong one in our envelope . . . As a gentleman, we wouldn't dream of blackmailing him on the contents of ours . . . Joe's here making a short film for the Government and wondering whether Producer Eddie Rich will take "The Lady and the Tiger" to New York . . . If so, Joe will have the lead as he did in the Clinton (N. J.) summer tryout . . . He was set for Margo Jones' production of "A Streetcar Named Desire," by Tennessee Williams . . . But when John Garfield was replaced by Marlon Brando, the ages of everyone in the cast got shunted around.

COCKEYED but logical was the first rehearsal of "Medea" in New York . . . John Gielgud is directing the Grecian tragedy with Judith Anderson in the title role, with Robert Whitehead and Oliver Rae producing. Everything was set for rehearsals and an October 20 opening . . . But neither the producers nor Gielgud had been able to find an actor suitable for the role of Jason . . . You've guessed what happened . . . Gielgud will play the part himself, which gives him a considerably harder year than he'd planned . . . For he must be ready by November 29 for "Crime and Punishment," in which he'll repeat the role of Raskolnikoff, one of his great London triumphs . . . He'll only do a limited run in the Dostoievski drama, for the part got him so tired in London that by the end of the run he thought he was going to go the way of Raskolnikoff . . . After that he goes to London for Terence Rattigan's two one-acters . . . The same Rattigan whose "The Winslow Boy" arrives here two weeks from last night.

COCKEYED, in the bibulous sense, were the two fellows we overheard in front of the Trans-Lux, where they're running another of those sports shows . . . The guys were arguing who would win the Dempsey-Sharkey fight, which tops the advertising cards in front of the house . . . "Dempsey'll lick him hollow," said one. "Betcha he won't," belched the other . . . Then they went in to find out.

COCKEYED in a funny way is the Beverly Theater's announcement that from now on, Sunday programs will open on Saturdays . . . Very simple: the twice-a-week program change still holds good, but new programs will go in on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

COCKEYED, too, are the efforts to keep the "Monsieur Verdoux" opening linked up with Capitol Hill doings . . . First, the picture and the Un-American Activities Committee had nearly the same opening day . . . Then the Chaplin film lost its home and got five new ones . . . Now, doggoned if the committee hearing isn't postponed . . . Next thing we'll probably get is a telegram from the Hill saying October 20 is the date for the "committee that couldn't be stopped."



NOW GARSON'S BACK: Greer Garson returns to the Palace screen Thursday with newcomer Richard Hart in a drama titled "Desire Me." Zoe Akins is one of the coauthors and Robert Mitchum is another costar

AIRPORT DRIVE-IN THEATRE

Irene Dunne Starts 'Airtel'

Hollywood—First post-war hostelry in southern California to cater to private plane owners is to be established by Irene Dunne and her husband, Dr. Francis Griffin.

While the star was on location at Agoura, Calif., for RKO Radio's "I Remember Mama," she and her husband bought the nearby Ojai Valley Country Club.

They have already started remodeling the building and grounds and have begun construction on an airport which will offer every facility for air-minded vacationers. The project may be the first in a series of similar motels or, rather, airtels, throughout the country.

Backstage Nonsense

In a scene for "Mary Hagen," Shirley Temple said "Who am I? Who am I?" and then suddenly forgot the rest of her line. "Okeh," she continued, after a brief pause for blushing, "What in the world am I: animal, vegetable or mineral?" "You're a nut," said Director Peter Godfrey as he halted the cameras.

The Picture That Couldn't Be Stopped!

LADY, CAN YOU TAKE A DARE?

Lady, start laughing at yourself!

It's your woman's right to know before hand that when you see Charles Chaplin's sensational motion picture, "Monsieur Verdoux," you see yourself—and how funny you can get.

Women without a sense of humor needn't apply.

In "Monsieur Verdoux" Charles Chaplin has used his own, inimitable brand of humor to perpetuate the best joke on women since The Serpent persuaded Eve that an apple was good for the complexion.

Every feminine foible and failing is there. In "Monsieur Verdoux" Chaplin puts on the screen all the things a woman's best friend won't tell her, without a little urging.

As a modern French Bluebeard, Verdoux loves and liquidates the ladies. The ladies bring it on themselves. They're susceptible, suspicious, sour, saccharine, simple and snobbish. Worse than that, they're crazy about the fellow.

The theme is startling. The love story is strange. And the laughter is earth-shaking.

Husbands laugh at "Monsieur Verdoux." Boy friends — even bachelors — laugh at "Monsieur Verdoux."

The ladies? The ladies laugh too—but there is a peculiar quality to that laughter.

Most critics have termed reaction to the film "hysterical"—wouldn't you know?

Postoffice Robbed

Federal Men On Trail of Safe Thieves

Montgomery County police who for months have been trying to break up a safecracking gang yesterday were joined by Federal authorities as a United States postoffice safe was broken into.

Detectives expressed the view that the same gang which has eluded them jimmied open a safe in the Ashton postoffice Ashton, Md., and stole between $60 and $70 in currency early yesterday.

On Sunday night, approximately $630 was stolen from a safe in a filling station owned by Spencer J. H. Brown in Sandy Spring, Md., only a mile from the Ashton theft.

Postmaster Isaac A. Smith of Ashton, said only currency was taken from the postal safe. An unknown quantity of quarters was taken from the cash register of his general store which houses the small postoffice.

As postal inspectors joined in the search for the gang, Police Chief Charles M. Orme of Montgomery County issued a warning to all merchants and businessmen cautioning them against leaving large amounts of money in their safes.

The gang has entered places securely locked in the past, he said. The small safes used by the majority of local businessmen are easy prey for the gang, which operates with professional skill, he added.

In reporting the $630 theft to police, Brown said he had been having trouble with the combination on his safe and when he closed Sunday night had not turned the knob on the safe's dial. The thieves just pulled the door open, he said.

Berwyn Motorist Pleads Guilty to Six Traffic Charges

Fines totaling $250 and a six-month suspended sentence were imposed in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday on 18-year-old Richard K. Betts of 9096 Baltimore blvd., Berwyn, Md., for seven traffic violations.

Betts was arrested September 12 by Prince Georges County Policemen Jamen H. Burgess and Wallace L. Baker after a chase at speeds up to 100 miles an hour. The officers fired five shots at the fleeing car during the chase.

Betts pleaded guilty on all charges, except one for having an inadequate muffler, for which he received a $10 suspended fine. Other fines meted out by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie were: Exceeding 70 miles an hour, $100; reckless driving, $100; failing to remain in designated lane, $10; failing to obey an officer's command, $25; passing a stop sign, $10, and failing to have an operator's permit in his possession, $2. Costs of $13.70 also were imposed. The suspended six-month sentence was for exceeding 70 miles an hour.

The policemen testified that the car narrowly missed State Policeman Ernest Hudgins directing traffic, a police car, and two women pedestrians during the chase. One of the shots fired passed through the rear window and front windshield and caused the driver to slow enough to be halted. The four other shots were directed at the tires.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

La Guardia Praised For Underdog Aid

By Drew Pearson

I have written several thousand words about Fiorello LaGuardia while he was living; but, even though I can't do justice to him, I should like to write one more column now that he has reached the end of the road.

Mr. LaGuardia

LaGuardia is hard to write about because his life was so full, his character so varied. He was either on the crest of the wave or down in the dumps, either chasing fire engines or driving gangsters out of New York, either spending millions feeding Europe or nursing nickels to keep a roof over his head.

I have been sitting at the typewriter, trying to describe LaGuardia the Congressman, getting in the hair of both parties, fighting always for what he thought was right, always on the side of the underdog. Those were the carefree days when Fiorello used to cook spaghetti in Bob Allen's kitchen, and when, as a joke on my old friend Capt. Eugene Regnier, military aide to Secretary of State Stimson, I induced LaGuardia to tack an amendment on the War Department appropriation bill providing that "no money should be expended for the salary of a military aide to any civilian member of the Cabinet." Stimson, who had a weak spot for military folderol, nearly had a fit. Later we withdrew the amendment.

Then there were the days when LaGuardia, a Republican, was defeated by none other than his good friend Roosevelt and the Democratic landslide which swept FDR into power. Fiorello was flat broke in those days, scarcely knew where the next meal was coming from, but he rode on the subway, saved his nickels. He passed up the juicy law fees offered him by questionable clients, and stayed broke. In fact, aside from his salary as Mayor of New York, Fiorello has been broke most of his life.

There were the depression days. LaGuardia was struggling to balance New York's budget—with New York taxpayers owing the city 400 million dollars unpaid taxes. So the Little Flower, genius that he was, persuaded Jesse Jones to loan him RFC money with unpaid taxes as collateral.

There were also the days when LaGuardia worried about his own election. Roosevelt never really came out strong for him, despite their close personal friendship, but 50,000 Democrats once wrote his name on the Democratic primary ballot—even though he was a Republican . . . "If my parents had only given me a different name," moaned Fiorello. "That name costs me 250,000 votes at every election." . . . Despite the name, it was Fiorello who carried Tom Dewey along on the GOP ticket in Dewey's first real plunge into politics . . . and despite the name, LaGuardia telegraphed FDR after the unsuccessful 1938 purge against Senators George and Tydings: "You should have planted a Little Flower in Georgia and Maryland."

Was Own Press Agent

LaGuardia ran his public relations like the bandmaster his father was. "It's confidential," he used to tell the press. "Don't mention my name when you write it." . . . "When I've got anything to say, I'll say it myself," he announced, firing his press agent. . . . "I'm too young to be Secretary of War," he told reporters who inquired if he was entering the Roosevelt Cabinet. . . . "When I took over New York I fired the bad commissioners," LaGuardia once cracked at his friend, F. D. R., "in Washington they create new jobs for them." . . . And stationing Ernest Cuneo beside a fire alarm during one political speech, he warned: "Don't let anyone pull the fire alarm and get the crowd to run out."

Fiorello flew a flag on his car with one more star than General MacArthur . . . He raised Cain with the State Department when they wouldn't let him supply a mounted escort to Philippine President Quezon. "Those white-spat boys say Quezon rates below a Senator," complained LaGuardia . . . While he visited Stalin two years ago, he sent other members of his UNRRA party to see Lenin's tomb. "I got as much out of Stalin as they did out of Lenin," he remarked later . . . LaGuardia's dislike of Herbert Hoover remained as constant at the end as during his days in Congress when he used to jibe at his "alleged" party leader in the White House. "Hoover brought back nothing UNRRA didn't already know," he said of Hoover's recent survey of Europe.

Suffered Disappointments

In his later years LaGuardia suffered two great disappointments. One was his failure to be made a U. S. Senator. The other was F.D.R.'s refusal to make him a brigadier general in charge of the Italian Military Government. Roosevelt had promised him the latter job, and Fiorello had his heart set on it, but the brass hats intervened.

Asked whether he would run for Governor of New York, La Guardia once replied: "I never take a step backward." Urged to run for President of the United States, he answered: "I'm too busy running New York City." But when asked if he would run for U. S. Senator, he said: "I'd run like a fire engine." That was LaGuardia's greatest ambition. And sometimes in Washington he would sit in the Senate gallery, looking down, watching with envy the debates of the world's greatest deliberative body—debates in which he was never allowed to participate.

Several weeks ago I had occasion to telephone LaGuardia in New York. He was still the same old Fiorello, still battling, still complaining in that squeaky voice of his.

"The place isn't the same anymore," he said when I asked him why he didn't come down to Washington.

"Something's happened. There's too much timidity around the White House. Something's gone out of the place. I'm worried. There just isn't anybody out working for the people anymore."

That was the last conversation I had with LaGuardia, a man who with all his grand-standing and all his hair-pulling spent his life even up to the very end working for the people. Son of an Italian immigrant bandmaster and a Portuguese Jewess, he was a man such as only this country can produce. He was a great American. And America will be a lot emptier now that he has reached the end of the road.

Two Men Bind, Rape Va. Woman

Richmond, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—The 36-year-old wife of a chemical plant foreman was found trussed with wire along a suburban Richmond roadside today, and after hospitalization reported to police she had been forced into an automobile by two young white men who later raped and tied her.

The woman reported that she was returning to her home last night when an automobile drew up alongside her and one of the two occupants jumped out and grabbed her.

After driving for about an hour the men finally stopped on a dark lane in Westover Hills, bound her with wire and raped her. She lay on the ground throughout the night until M. C. Huband found her this morning at 8 o'clock.

New York Cotton

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—Cotton futures today weakened under renewed pressure of hedge selling, following early steadiness and gains of almost $1.50 a bale. New Orleans and locals turned to the selling side, and final prices were 25 to 95 cents a bale lower.

Traders generally felt that the recent hurricane has done relatively little damage to the cotton crop, although grades have undoubtedly been lowered in the storm-affected areas. This sentiment partially accounted for the reaction in futures.

Liquidation in nearby October, prior to first notice day September 25, also discouraged rallying tendencies. Mills were reported showing fair interest in spot cotton offerings in the belief that prices will move lower later in the ginning season.

"What this country amounts to depends on what happens to its homes."... That's why the life insurance companies and their agents are bringing you this series of messages from the nation's foremost authorities, to help you plan for happiness in the handling of your family money. (This is message No. 21:)

Walt Murray thought he had everything under control...

...but when he talked to Tex McDonald he realized that the plan he had set up for his family just didn't fit them any more!

by LAURENCE J. ACKERMAN

Laurence Ackerman

MANY American families are not making the best use of their life insurance. Usually their life insurance program has not been kept in line with their changed family needs. Some friends of mine—let's call them the Murrays—were a very good example of what I mean.

Walt Murray paid his premiums regularly. The whole family thought that was all there was to it. This year, when Walt met Tex McDonald, one of the best agents in our town, they got to talking about life insurance and Walt got quite a surprise . . .

Conditions had changed so in five years that the Murrays' insurance, as it was set up, no longer gave the results that Walt desired. After some study, Tex completely rearranged Walt Murray's life insurance program so that it met his family's needs.

Everyone isn't in the same position as the Murrays, but everyone's life is constantly changing . . . Perhaps you have married. If so, you should have your policies changed to make your wife the beneficiary. Or if you've had a baby, you'll want the newcomer named a beneficiary also.

If you're out of the service, there's your G.I. Life Insurance. Your agent can easily fit it into your life insurance program. Or your agent can help you plan a program that will meet your ideas about retirement. He can show you how to arrange an endowment policy . . . or perhaps explain how your straight life insurance may provide retirement income later on when your family needs less protection.

My advice to those who want to get the most out of their life insurance, is not to think of it as something just to buy and put away. Life insurance not only has to fit your needs when you buy it, it has to be constantly re-examined to see if it still fits. Seek out a good agent. Take him into your confidence about your plans and let him help you.

"... and this one is your college education, darling!"

How to PLAN for Family Happiness

● Planning to get the most from your life insurance is only part of sound money planning. You'll be more likely to have enough money when you need it, if you'll follow these rules:

FOR TODAY . . . The first thing, for most families, is to take care of the larger fixed items such as rent, taxes, insurance, mortgage and installment payments, etc.

So start by adding up all your fixed items for the year, divide by 52, and set aside that amount weekly.

Also every family should have a "rainy day" fund equal to at least four weeks' income. Set aside a little every week until you have that much. Then, you'll know how much you can spend for food, clothing, heat, light, amusements, and so forth.

FOR TOMORROW . . . We live in a changing world. Family needs and circumstances change . . . living costs . . . taxes. If you have not had your life insurance program reviewed lately, the chances are 2 to 1 that it should be brought up to date.

There are so many ways in which you can use your life insurance, that you should have the life insurance you now own checked to see if it is suited to your needs. This is a service that comes with your life insurance.

The person best equipped to help you with this is the well-trained life insurance agent. Get in touch with your agent, or write your life insurance company. INSTITUTE OF LIFE INSURANCE, 60 East 42nd Street, New York 17, N. Y.

First Filene 'Cooperative' Being Built

By S. Oliver Goodman

Construction of a $500,000 cooperative department store, first of its kind in the country, is under way in the nearby Shirlington, Va., business center.

Sponsored by the Consumers Distribution Corp., the enterprise will be known as E. A. Filene Cooperative of Virginia, Inc. It has been chartered in Virginia for $500,000 capital, of which $200,000 will be held as preferred stock by C. D. C. and $300,000 is being sold as participating common stock in the Washington-northern Virginia area.

Described as an experiment in cooperative retailing, the store is expected to be the first of a chain of customer-owned department stores. Two other stores are being built in Irvington, N. J., and Providence, R. I.

The E. A. Filene name was chosen in memory of the Boston merchant and philanthropist who founded the Consumer Distribution Corp.

Lester G. Ott, president of the Filene Store, has had 17 years of experience as store manager, merchandise manager and regional manager of the W. T. Grant Co. For six years he served as general manager and regional manager of Whelan Drug Stores. Vice president of the new cooperative store is David Scull, president of the District of Columbia Credit Union League. Secretary is Glenn Wall, of the research department of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. Together with Gott, Scull and Wall, local directors will include C. Edward Behre, president of Rochdale Cooperative Stores, Inc., and W. Robert Volckhausen, secretary of the Potomac Cooperative Federation.

The 6000 shares of common stock will be issued in $50 units. No member may own more than $1000 worth and each member, regardless of holdings, will be entitled to one vote.

The Shirlington store is expected to open for business early next spring.

SALES SLUMP: Sales of ordinary life insurance here tumbled 15 per cent in August as compared with same 1946 month, Life Insurance Agency Management Association reported. Washington total for month was $10,431,000. For first eight months this year, insurance sales here aggregated $85,073,000, off 5 per cent from same 1946 period. Nationally, insurance sales were down 13 per cent in August and 6 per cent for the first eight months.

SPEAKS TONIGHT: M. S. Szymczak, member of the Federal Reserve System board of governors for past 14 years, will speak tonight at a meeting of District of Columbia Control, Controllers Institute of America. He will discuss the economic situation in Germany at the Raleigh Hotel dinner. Formerly director of the economics division of the American Military Government in Germany, Szymczak will give personal observations. In a story Sunday, Szymczak was erroneously identified as president of a Philadelphia bank.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Henry S. Owens of Washington nominated for three-year term on council of American Institute of Accountants . . . John C. Moore appointed director of scientific section of National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association . . . G. Reed Schreiner named director of advertising of United States Steel Corp. to succeed Charles R. Moffatt who will retire September 30 . . . James A. Sheehan promoted to traveling freight and passenger agent of Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railroad in Washington office.

PERSONAL DEBT: The American people as a whole are 3 billion dollars deeper in debt today than at the first of the year largely because of record high prices, the Institute of Life Insurance reported. Rise in personal debt so far this year is a continuation of the trend in 1946 when the total increased 8.1 billion dollars, the biggest annual rise on record, the institute said. Debts used in the institute's study consisted of mortgages on homes and farms, loans on life insurance policies, and consumer credit. As an indication of the course many Americans are following, the institute said, "more than one quarter of the Nation's 46,300,000 spending units lived beyond their incomes last year, either by drawing on savings or borrowing." Purchase of homes accounted for the largest single increase in personal debt.

SAVINGS PLANNED: The Greyhound Corp. has called a special meeting of stockholders for November 5 to vote on changing common stock from no par to $3 a share and on reducing authorized stock from 15 million to 12 million shares. Primary reason to change par value is to permit stockholders to make a "substantial" saving in transfer taxes. Company believes it may be able to recoup cost of exchange within few years through lower franchise taxes in State of Delaware where it is incorporated.

ODD LOTS: Steel production this week estimated at 1,646,700 tons, or 94.1 per cent of capacity, compared with 89.4 per cent in previous week. . . . Kaiser-Frazer Corp. announced it will produce 100,000 automobiles this Thursday . . . Seaboard Air Line Railroad asks bids on $4,500,000 worth of trust certificates to be expended on new equipment.

Cards Stay in Fight With 4-2 Victory

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 22.—Lynn Waldorf, the ample fellow who left the security of his job at Northwestern to rebuild the sagging football fortunes of University of California, is nicely out in front at this point with a 33-7 victory over Santa Clara. On Saturday, Navy moves down from its offshore hermitage near Seattle to give Waldorf's Bears a better test.

POVICH

It's not exactly a clash of Titans, though. In Navy, California will be meeting a school that won only one game last season. However, the Bears won only two ball games in 1946 and the student body gave the boot to Head Coach Frank Wickhorst. California's student body is always to be reckoned with by whoever happens to be the football coach, but for Waldorf it is a nice gamble. They didn't lure him away from Northwestern with peanuts, and he's clutching a five-year contract that they have to pay off if they don't like him.

California would like very much to lick Navy, incidentally. Waldorf made a place in the press box for Navy scouts when the Bears played Santa Clara last Saturday, but he was turned down cold when he asked space for his own scouts at Navy's informal scrimmage with the University of Washington at Seattle. California coaches thought they had that courtesy coming to them. Navy said you aren't supposed to scout scrimmages.

ED ERDELATZ and Johnny Wilson, the Navy coaches who scouted the Bears against Santa Clara, hopped a special plane back to Seattle to report to Head Coach Tom Hamilton, with fat sheaves of notes on the California club. Erdelatz was wearing deep furrows in his forehead as he explained. He's the coach of Navy's ends, you see.

"My ends are going to have a rugged day against the Bears," he said.

"Waldorf sends most of his plays to the outside. They run those sweeps off their T-formation and were knocking down the Santa Clara ends all day. We'll have five ends available on Saturday, but I wish we had a dozen. We could use 'em. They're not going to run through our middle. It's my boys on the flanks who are going to catch it."

Confidentially, though, Erdelatz doesn't think the Bears are going to sweep with much success around Navy's left side. Like the other Navy coaches, he's high on Left End Art Markel, and would like to come up with Markel's twin brother, if he had a twin. The other end post is widely unsettled, with Phil Ryan perhaps out in front of Harrison Frazier and Roy Russell.

CALIFORNIA is probably deeper than Navy in reserves, which is no great trick this season, what with the Middies shy of talent. After the Santa Clara game, when Waldorf saw two of his teams stomp over the Broncos, he volunteered the information that "I can't rightly tell my first team from my second club, they're that close."

Whereat J. Flynn, Navy's minister of propaganda and public enlightenment, with portfolio that would choke a hippo, retorted: "That's great. Waldorf can't tell his first club from his second team. Navy doesn't have that trouble. What worries us after our first team is which club is our fourth team. We don't have any second team."

San Francisco suddenly has become the naval capital of the United States this week. The Big Braid has discovered pressing duties that bring them to this section of California, a very happy coincidence what with Navy playing Cal on Saturday. It's all very wonderful the way it works out.

SAN FRANCISCO folks set a new professional football attendance record for the town yesterday when 52,800 of 'em piled into Kezar Stadium to see the hometown Forty-Niners take a 21-16 beating from the New York Yankees of the All-American Conference. They saw what may be the best club in pro football in the Yanks.

Certainly the Yankees are the biggest club in either pro circuit. Coach Ray Flaherty, a long-time dissenter against the T formation, has a club that generates tremendous power off the single wing, with Spec Sanders, the hefty Texan, perhaps an even more dangerout ball carrier than Buddy Young.

Apparently it's a rough league the Yankees are in, though. They were knocked off in their season's opener by Buffalo, quarterbacked by George Ratterman, the former Notre Damer. That reminds me that Ratterman caught it from Coach Frank Leahy last year after one of his passes was intercepted by an Illinois back. "How come you threw it to him?" he asked Ratterman, who gave the honest answer: "Well, he was the only man open."

Bell Pounds Out Decision Over Hursey

BULLETIN

Tommy Bell, Youngstown, Ohio, pounded out a unanimous decision over Smuggy Hursey, Washington, in a 10-round bout at Griffith Stadium last night. Bell won all but one round.

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Tommy Bell, nationally known Youngstown, Ohio, welterweight contender, was a 2 to 1 ringside favorite to defeat Middleweight Smuggy Hursey of Washington, at Griffith Stadium last night.

A top coated crowd estimated at 7000 was on hand to see if Hursey, undefeated in a year, could make the grade against the type of big league opposition Bell was expected to provide.

Hursey, who agreed to make 155 pounds for the fight, scaled 133, four pounds more than Bell.

Marty Gallagher, the former District heavyweight challenger, was the referee.

West Rallies to Win

Sonny Boy West, lightweight pride of Mel Stevenson's stable, rallied in the late rounds to decision Johnny Edington, Youngstown, Ohio, in the special sixth.

Eddington carried the fight to West in the first two rounds, but Sonny Boy took command from the third on, flooring Edington for an eight count in the fifth. West weighed 133, Edington, a stablemate of Tommy Bell's, 135.

Heavyweight Elkins Brothers of Washington, opened the show with a four-round decision over Eddie Robertson of Baltimore. Lightweight Jerry Meklir of New York, pounded out a win over Maury Nelson, Baltimore in a six.

ROUND ONE

Long-armed Bell acted as if he would make quick work of Hursey. After warding off Smuggy with several stinging lefts, Bell let go with a hard right to the head and followed with a left hook to the side of the head which hurt Hursey. Bell continued to hammer his shorter foe and in the closing seconds actually threw Hursey to the canvas. Bell's round.

ROUND TWO

Hursey, bouncing out of his corner, landed two hard body blows on Bell in the opening seconds, but Bell took them with plenty to spare. Tommy then tore into Hursey again, bouncing lefts and rights off Hursey at will. Hursey appeared tired and hurt. Bell's round.

ROUND THREE

They traded lefts to the body as this round opened, but Bell followed with a vicious left to the head which sent Hursey sprawling for the count of six. Bell then almost tore Smuggy's head off with another hook to the head. Hursey's knees were wobbly but he lasted the round, although Bell twice tried to finish him off. Bell's round.

FOURTH ROUND

Despite the terrific pounding he had taken, Hursey appeared fresher as the round began. Bell tattooed him again by jolting and mixing but Hursey, boring, landed a good left to the head and a right to the side of the head to slow Bell down. Hursey was still being outmaneuvered and handled like a toy by Bell. Bell's round.

ROUND FIVE

This is Hursey's best round. He was beating Bell to the punch, ducking under Bell's long left leads and landing with solid shots to the body. But Bell, resourceful as ever, won the round with another flurry of hard jabs to the body and head. Bell's round.

ROUND SIX

Bell was tiring and Hursey, calling on youth and stamina, scored his first real success. Ducking under a Bell left, the Smug planted a stinging right to Bell's head on the ropes and then bored in the rest of the way. Bell preferred to box, allowing Hursey to come to him and the Smug did, scoring with body punches. Hursey's round.

SEVENTH ROUND

EIGHTH ROUND

Hursey made the sad mistake of trying to butt Bell as the round opened and Bell responded by giving the Smug a sound boxing lesson. Bell twice pushed Hursey against the ropes and tried to get the payoff blow in, but missed both times. He continued to pile up points, however, with lefts to the head. Bell's round.

NINTH ROUND

Bell showed the works in this round, nailing Hursey with everything, but still failed to bring Hursey down as the younger Smug stubbornly hung on. Bell missed his best chance when he failed to connect with a hard right after knocking Hursey, almost through the ropes with a left hook which landed flush on the chin. Bell's round.

Brecheen's Timely Hit Beats Cubs

St. Louis, Sept. 22 (AP).—The stubborn St. Louis Cardinals retained their mathematical chance for a tie with Brooklyn for the National League championship, at least temporarily, by defeating the Chicago Cubs, 4-2, today in the first game of a day-night double-header. Pitcher Harry (The Cat) Brecheen won his own game with a two-run single in the eighth.

A Chicago victory in tonight's game would clinch the pennant for the idle Dodgers. Only 1940 fans paid to see the afternoon contest and separate admissions will be charged for the night game.

Brecheen haad three hits and limited the Cubs to seven safeties in scotching his sixteenth victory against 11 losses.

Brecheen Comes Through

ond baseman

A free pass to Terry Moore, Second Baseman Ray Mack's miscue on Marty Marion's grounder and another walk to Pinch Batter Whitey Kurowski filled the bases in the eighth, and Cardinal Manager Eddie Dyer decided to permit his ace southpaw to bat instead of sending in a pinch hitter.

Brecheen slammed the first pitch into left center for a clean single, driving in Moore and Marion to give the Redbirds a 3-1 edge. Joffre Cross, running for Kurowski, scored later on a wild pitch by Ralph Hamner, who limited the Cardinals to five hits but gave up 10 bases on balls.

The Cubs picked up another run in the ninth on doubles by Cliff Aberson and Andy Pafko after Waitkus had grounded out, but Brecheen forced Bob Scheffing to ground out and then struck out Bill Nicholson to end the game.

Cards Take Lead

The Cardinals took the lead in the third inning when Red Schoendienst walked and then scored on Stan Musial's grounder, which took a bad hop and got through Shortstop Bob Sturgeon for a double.

The Cubs tied the score in the seventh. Eddie Waitkus doubled to right, advanced on Aberson's single and went home as Andy Pafko hit into a force play.

Cubs Lead Cards, 3-2

St. Louis, Sept. 22.—The St. Louis Cardinals were trailing the Chicago Cubs, 3-2, after four innings of their National League game here tonight. A loss for the Cards would eliminate them from pennant contention.

Louise Suggs Posts 78 for Medal Honors

By Frank Kenesson

Detroit, Sept. 22 (AP).—Dark-haired little Louise Suggs, the western champion from Lithia Springs, Ga., firing the only round under 80, captured medalist honors in the Forty-seventh Women's National Amateur Golf Championship today with a 31-41—78 over the cold, wind-swept fairways at Franklin Hills Country Club.

Slapping in four birdies in a brilliant six-hole streak midway, through her 18-hole qualifying round, Miss Suggs required but 30 putts for the distance and coasted to her medalist laurels by a three-stroke edge over six-time champion Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page of Greensboro, N. C., tall Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, and Helen Sigel of Philadelphia, who shared the runner-up position at 81.

Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta, needing birdies at the seventeenth and eighteenth to claim a share of the medalist honor she won a year ago at Tulsa, Okla., went over par on each hole and finished at 82, in a four-way deadlock with Rosann Shaffer of Toledo, Ohio, Mary McMillin of Green Bay, Wis., and Mrs. Eddie Bush of Detroit.

Grace Lenczyk, 19-year-old Newingtonfi Conn., winner of the Canadian Women's Open title last week, shared the 83 slot with Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., and Sally Session of Muskegon, Mich.

Two veterans, six-time champion Mrs. Glenna Collet Vare of Philadelphia and Maureen Orcutt of Haworth, N. J., twice runner-up and three-time medalist, squeezed into the match play pairings with 89 each, the last score to get in without playing off.

It's Friendship, Friendship That Brings Players to A. U.

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

THREE SINCERE YOUNG men, involved in charges they were "lured" to American University to play basketball, yesterday sat down and did some explaining.

When they were through you believed them. You also wondered about the origin of a Sunday blast in which Carl Wise, basketball coach of Washington and Lee University, accused American University of applying financial pressure to obtain outstanding cagers.

Stars Robert (Pete) Negley of North Carolina State, and Don Hillock and Reggie Crockett of W. and L., were unanimous in one sentiment—each said:

"I am enrolling at American University this week, planning to play basketball. By transferring to A. U., however, I will be losing money."

FRIENDSHIP, you are given to understand, is one of the main reasons three of the brightest prospects in the Southern Conference are transferring to the little (athletically) school on Nebraska ave. Negley was named All-Southern guard last year, Crocket was All-State center and Hillock was a second team All-State forward.

It all bgins with popular Staff Cassell, A. U. coach whom his students lovingly call "Pop." His 1947 team captain is Bart Fugler, a buddy of Negley's on the Iowa Pre-Flight team in 1945. Fugler is also a former teammate of Hillock's on the Woodrow Wilson High team which won the D. C. championship in 1942. Crocket gets into the tight little group as a fraternity buddy as well as a teammate of Hillock on the 1946 W. and L. team. The pair determined to stick together throughout college.

Hillock received a farewell letter from Coach Wise at W. and L. expressing "thorough understanding" of his transfer.

AS THE TRIO explained things yesterday, facts and figures on the switch took shape. It was one of teh few times light has been thrown on the "subsidization" of athletics. Here's the statement on what each will receive at A. U. and said he has received elsewhere.

At American University:

$75 a month worth of room and board on "workship." $65 a month under GI benefits ($90 if married).

At N. C. State (Negley):

$40 a month in meal tickets. Free room rent. $10 a month spending money (cut off after Christmas, 1946). $120 a quarter, tuition refund. $8.75 a quarter, laundry. $65 a month under GI benefits.

At W. and L. (Crockett and Hillock):

$50 a month on "workship." Room and board. ($50 extra a month to Hillock as married man with two children). $65 a month under GI benefits ($90 to Hillock).

In addition each player said he was coming to A. U. for courses he was unable to get at last year's alma mater. Negley wanted a physical education degree, Crockett one in transportation and Hillock one in busines sadministration.

Paris, Key Figure In Grid Bribe Case, Is Paroled

New York, Sept. 22 (AP).—Alvin J. Paris, central figure in last winter's attempt to "fix" a championship professional football game between the New York Giants and the Chicago Bears, was paroled from city prison today after serving nine months and one week of a one-year term for attempted bribery.

Paris, 29-year-old novelty salesman, testified as chief State witness in the trial of Harvey Stemmer, Jerome Zarowitz and David P. Krakauer. Stemmer and Krakauer were sent to prison for from five to ten years each and Zarowitz received a pentitentiary term of from one to three years.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan requested leniency for Paris because of his aid to the State. Paris was convicted of attempting to bribe Giant stars Frank Filchock and Merle Hapes.

Tigers Divide With Indians, 7-6 and 6-4

Detroit, Sept. 22 (AP).—Hank Edwards' ninth-inning homer moved Detroit back into a second-place tie with Boston by giving Cleveland a 7-to-6 nightcap win today after the Tigers had won the first game of a doubleheader, 6 to 4.

With his three-run circuit clout Edwards matched Detroit's Roy Cullenbine, whose twenty-fourth home run an inning earlier had given the Tigers a three-run lead and whose double in the eighth inning of the opener drove in the winning runs.

Ed Klieman gained the victory before Bobby Feller was called in to pitch the ninth and hurled hitless ball.

Young Art Houtteman weathered two bad innings to win the opener, besting Al Gettel and Steve Gromek.

A crowd of 12,955 fans, braving below-50 degree temperature saw the final home games of the season, boosting Detroit's total paid attendance for 80 games to 1,397,093.

Nats Can Spoil Yank Series Plans in Doubleheader Today

New York, Sept. 22.—The Nats, who rank third in the book of Champion Yankees as their most difficult opponents, have a dual opportunity to give Manager Bucky Harris another trying time tomorrow.

Rained out today, the Nats are scheduled to end their season's activities against the Yankees with a double header tomorrow. Under ordinary circumstances, with the Yankees playing their junior varsity while regulars rest and the Ossie Bluegs irrevocably in seventh place, the rain bill wpuld have no more significance than a dirty finger nail in the third grade.

The Yankees, however, are pointing their prospective series pitchers for next Tuesday's extra-curricular activities against the Dodgers and at this point Harris' blueprint still isn't complete because Frank Shea and Vic Raschi still are to be tested.

Shea, the precocious rookie who seemed on his way to "outstanding honors" before screaming muscles in his right arm took their toll at midseason, and Raschi are to face the Nats in the twin bill.

If Frank goes well tomorrow, he can be written down as a fairly decent bet to open the series for the Yankees. Allie Reynolds, the champion's biggest winner with 18, is a certain starter in the second game, because the former Cleveland Indian has considerable trouble away from the Stadium's friendly acres.

Ole Bobo Newsom who says he's carrying a personal grudge against Branch Rickey, is figured for the third game, which will be the first at Ebbetts Field. For the fourth contest, Harris still wavers between Raschi and Bill Bevens.

The Nats, who have whipped the Yankees seven times in 20 tries can throw this beautiful picture out of focus.

Richmond Calls For League Ruling On Star's Status

Richmond, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—Athletics Director Malcolm U. Pitt of the University of Richmond has asked the Southern Conference to rule on the eligibility of the Spiders' three-sport freshman star Vernon Morgan, who was signed to a New York Giants minor league contract in 1944 but never reported or played.

In the meantime, the University of Richmond disclosed that Morgan, an outstanding football back, would not be allowed to play against Washington and Lee here Saturday night. He did not compete against Randolph-Macon in the Spiders' opener here last Saturday.

No conference member has officially questioned Morgan's eligibility but there has been a certain amount of unofficial discussion of his status.

What prompted the discussion was the fact that the young athlete, along with his father, signed the minor league contract with the Giants in the summer of 1944 which assigned him to the Springfield, Ohio, club of the Middle Atlantic League.

His name is still carried on te voluntary retired list in National Association baseball headquarters at Columbus, Ohio.

Menendez-Ahearn Fight for Boxing Dates Flares Anew

The second round of the 1947 battle between rival Matchmakers Gabe Menendez of Turner's Arena and Goldie Ahearn of Liberty Athletic Club, took place in the District Boxing Commission office yesterday with an unofficial "no decision" verdict resulting.

Menendez, seeking to beat his rivals to the punch, presented contracts for a Turner's Arena fight October 13 between Middleweights Bee Bee Washington and Frank Lacy, while Ahearn wants the date for a possible Griffith Stadium bout between Welterweight Champion Ray Robinson and either Smuggy Hursey or Tommy Bell, who fought here last night.

After a lengthy closed session in which Menendez and Ahearn were most uncomplimentary in their remarks about

Bennings

At Marlboro.

Dear Folks:

The crowd was in a betting mood here last Saturday and put $403,000 in the machines, missing the record for a single race at this track by only $7000. Wagering for the meeting is running slightly less than 10 per cent behind that of 1946. Closing of the get-rich-quick joints in Prince Georges County has helped the track. It was thought at first that some operators would attempt to make book. However, most of the gamblers are betting, trying to beat the horses, even as you and I. Apprentice Jockey Joe Snyder, a Washington boy, is under contract to Trainer Dion K. Kerr and will ride at the Laurel meeting. Jockey George Smith has been coaching the lad who shows much promise. Jockey Stanley Austin likes horses foaled by the mare Anne Boleyn. Last Saturday Austin won with two of her daughters—Royal Favor and Boleyngrey—in consecutive races. See you on the rail. —Bill.

Terps Have Best Chance Of Winning

Georgetown, George Washngton and Maryland universities kick off Washington's collegiate football season Saturday when they journey to points south for their opening games.

Saturday's games find Georgetown's Hoyas playing at Wake Forest, N. C., G. W.'s Colonials against Virginia at Charlottesvile, andMaryland's Terps against South Carolina at Columbia.

The general feeling is that all the District entries will be at the best since before the war, and that Maryland has the best chanceof winning in this opening round of play.

Coach Jack Hagertyand his Hoyas will be out to avvenge the 19-6 defeat that Wake Forest inflictedon Georgetown last season. Hagerty will lead with Babe Baronowskiand Elmer Raba alternating at the quarters, and Lou Surman at halfback,Vic Banonis at center, and Bus Werderat oneof the guards.

Eachis a veteran of last year's Wake Forestgame. In fact, Raba suffered aleg injury thatkept him onthe benchfor most of the rest of the season. Werderis Georgetown's leading candidate for All-America honors.

Wake Forest will bank on one of the strongest aerial attacks in the South. Tom Felster, Bud Lall, To DiTomo and Ken Wheeler are all capable tosers, who have Red O'Quinn, Jim Duncan and Ed Hoey as their targets. O'Quinn ranked fourth among the Nation's pass receivers last year.

Colonials Good in Backfield

The George Washington Colonials have a good chance of catching the Cavaliers napping. Virginia is host to Harvard next week, and G. W. Coach Skip Stahley is hoping that the Cavaliers may be too concerned with that game to worry about the Colonials.

G. W. will field a well-balanced backfield of Art Kennedy at quarterback, Bob Mazero and Charlie Butler at the halves and Paul Skinner at fullback. Bill Spangler and Joe Bernot, who usually see lots of action at fullback, may be sidelined for the Virginia tilt, Spangler having strained a rib cartilage and Bernot his knee.

Freshman scatback Jimmy Kline is also expected to cause trouble. Carl Butkas and Harvey Shippman, 245 pounders at the tackles, will pace the G. W. line.

Virginia's big gun is 200-pound halfback, Bruce Bailey, a triple-threater. Two former Washington area boys will play for the Cavaliers. They are Gene Schroeder, former Anacostia High end, and Fullback Ray (All The Way) Brown of Falls Church.

Red Wrack Wins Feature At Marlboro

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Marlboro, Md., Sept. 22.—The 13th start of the year was the lucky one for Red Wrack, a 10-year-old owned by Mrs. Mary Knierlem of Cumberland, Md. The ancient gelding had tried a dozen times this season to get home in front and he finally turned the trick—definitely, by some four lengths.

In second position in the test named the Casino Royal Purse, came Mrs. A. E. Greer's Cash O'Boy, a 12-year-old and winner of $21,750 by virtue of 11 victories last year.

Third was A. Jensen's Don O'Sullivan. Red Wrack operated in the role of a favorite and was clocked in 1:56 4/5 for the mile and a sixteenth. The track was muddy as the result of heavy rain this morning, which held the attendance down to an estimated 5000.

Brinks, a long shot, and Royal Favor, winner of Saturday's feature, vied for the peacemaking honors with Brinks finally becoming established. However, when the real racing began, Red Wrack, in charge of Jockey F. Truschke, came with a rush to take command.

Red Wrack was drawing out in the stretch as Cash O'Boy, far back, early developed momentum and came with a sizzling drive in the stretch. However, the gallant move came too late to be good for anything but second money, ahead of Con O'Sullivan.

A disqualification marked the running of the third race, a scamper of five and a half furlongs for 2-year-olds. P. A. Rothfuss' Dusty Moments was the winner, but the filly didn't remain on top officially.

In coming out of the starting gate, Dusty Moments bore in toward the rail and crowded, among others, Mrs. D. K. Kerr's Speedy Rascal.

Bucs Decide Herman's Fate

Pittsburgh, Sept. 22 (AP).—Three deeply concerned co-owners of the Pittsburgh Pirates will meet here tomorrow to decide if Manager Billy Herman is to blame for the fact that a tide of freely spent greenbacks has failed to put the Buccos up among the National League leaders.

No bones have been made of the fact that Herman's job is hanging in the balance. Frank E. McKinney, Pirate president, has said the owners would not hesitate to buy up Billy's contract if it is decided his managerial strategy is faulty.

Billy himself has refused to alibi, saying he did the best he could with what he had. Concensus of fans is that poor pitching and inadequate catching has helped keep the Pirates bouncing in and out of the cellar.

The owners have made no secret of their disappointment in the way the club slid down hill after a good start which saw the Pirates win their first several games. With fans aroused to an enthusiastic pitch at the start, attendance reached record levels here but has dropped of late.

The club has spent $645,000 in cash for new players.

Redskins Release Gillette, Cifers Outright in Squad Cut

The Washington Redskins yesterday sent two players to the Wilmington, Del., Clippers, released two others outright and placed another on the reserve list. The moves were made to bring the Redskin squad down to the 35 player limit set by the National Professional Football League.

Bob Musick, former Southern California fullback, and Vince Pacewic, onetime fullback at the University of San Francisco, were sent to the Clippers, a Redskin farm club in the American Association.

Jim Gillette, former University of Virgnia halfback, and Ed Cifers, tackle from the University of Tennesee, were released outright.

Bill Dietz, a guard from the University of North Dakota, was placed on the reserve list and will be called back to the Redskins next year. In the meantime, Dietz will serve as an assistant coach at North Dakota.

Redskin notes:

Slingin' Sammy Baugh, who proved he's still the Redskins' No. 1 weapon during a 31-21 loss to the Green Bay Packers Sunday, came out of the game with his ribs still sore . . . End Jim Peebles who was moved to tackle Sunday probably will stay there on the strength of an excellent performance . . . John Steber's play at guard was one of the few bright spots in the Redskins' first-half effort . . . Some pooh-poohing is being done over Indian Jack Jacobs' selection as the outstanding player in Sunday's game . . . "He's not really that good," a few souls are saying about the former Redskin quarterback . . . Jacobs' three touchdown passes, however, will remain in the summaries . . . The Philadelphia Eagles, first playmates for the Redskins in the regular National Football League season Sunday, have won only one game out of eight between the teams in Philadelphia . . . Two were tied . . . Their last victory was in the first clash last year.

The Redskins will be honored today at a luncheon sponsored by the Advertising Club of Washington at 12:30 p. m. at the Staler Hotel.

Nick Damore Retires

Philadelphia, Sept. 22 (AP).—Nick Damore, outstanding goal tender of the 1945-46 Philadelphia Rockets of the American Hockey League, today announced his voluntary retirement from competition because of the recurrence of an old back injury.

Colts Play Eastern in Top Game

Calvin Coolidge's untested Colts begin the defense of their 1946 interhigh football championship Friday when they play Eastern's Ramblers at Eastern Stadium at 3:30 p. m. Helping the Colts and Ramblers as they usher in the '47 league season will be Anacostia's Indians and Central's Vikings, who meet at Central at 3:30.

Woodrow Wilson's Green Tigers and Western's Red Raiders, traditional rivals from the western section of the city, collide Saturday at Central at 2 p. m.

Roosevelt's Rugh Riders and McKinley Tech's Trainers wait until Monday to begin their interhigh campaigns. They'll play at Central since Roosevelt's stadium seats have been condemned, and Tech's stadium has no facilities for collecting tickets.

Eleven other schoolboy games, including the George Washington of Alexandria and Lane game which opens the Northern Virginia Class A conference season Friday at Charlottesville, are also on the weekend slate.

The top contest of the weekend, though, is the Coolidge-Eastern affair. The defending champions, even though they have their two all-highs of last year, Halfback Bobby Rohr and Tackle Chuck Ackerman, back, are considered pretty much a question mark.

Most of the coaches are picking Tech and Central as the teams to beat this year. The Trainers, who finished second last year, have eight of their last year's starters back, including their own "Mr. Inside," Cecil Gray and "Mr. Outside," Buggsy Thompson.

Central has 16 lettermen back from its third place club of last season. Dale Leathery is the Vikings' No. 1 linebucking threat, and Jimmy Pantos, the all-around boy. The Vikings have their whole line back from 1946.

The dark horse team is Western. The Red Raiders weren't considered much of a threat until they gave Washington-Lee of Arlington such a terrific battle last Saturday before losing, 21-7. Their backs, George Holmes, Don Strain and Dale Summerbell looked like they'll be trouble for the other interhigh teams.

Besides Western, four of the interhigh teams opened with nonleague games last week. All lost, Roosevelt, 6-0, to Martinsburg, W. Va.; Central 20-14, to Granby of Norfolk Va.; Wilson, 18-0, to Staunton, Va., Military Academy; and Eastern 14-7, to York, Pa.

Out Fishing...

By Jack Bell

THE FIRST WHTE fish caught on hook and line, off Ocean City, Md., was taken in 1935. Since then the fish are being taken in increasing numbers each year.

However, the top year was 1939 when 1345 white marlin were brought into port. The top day—still a record—was July 9 of the same year, when 171 were caught.

Last year, the last white marlin of the season caught at Ocean City, Md., was on September 10, up to then 327 were brought into port, and 47 boated and released uninjured back to the sea.

This year, the season apparently is running true to form, after about a three-week late start, because of an unseasonably cold spring, the spearbills continue to be caught. How much longer it is anyone's guess.

* * * *

LAST WEEK Francis X. Liverone, Arlington, Va., who is an ardent angler, made a trip to the popular fishing port. He reports, that upon arrival, he immediately visited the fishing dock, and to his surprise, found several marlin and an 8-foot 3-inch sailfish, the third of the season, hanging there.

The next morning, after a restless night, he tried to find a place on one of the boats going out, but no luck. That evening the boats returned "loaded" with white marlin, Capt. Talbot Bunting's boat taking high honors for the day with six.

The following morning, Captain Bunting, on a "fisherman's holiday" took Leverone along, the party included Stuart Anderson, Washington, D. C.; Norman Tondine, Salisbury, Md., and the craft skippered by Bill Burbage, Florida fishing guide. Before the morning was over each member of the party hooked and lost a white marlin.

A GREAT NUMBER were caught so far this month—36, of which four were released. Local anglers who have scored this this month at Ocean City, Md., were the following:

J. F. Kerkam, Washington, D. C., white marlin released; Margie Peterson, Rockville, Md., 32 pounds; John Sullivan, Washington, D. C., 46 pounds; Sue Gelbman, Alexandria, Va., 58 pounds; Francis X. Leverone, Arlington, Va., 62 pounds, and Raymond A. Evans, Washington, D. C., caught one of the three sailfish, a 72-pounder, was caught by James McConnell, Jersey City, N. J.

A total of 448 white marlin were brought in to the dock, and 61 released. Largest, a 110-pounder.

Cerdan Offered $20,000

Boston, Sept. 22 (AP).—Boxing Promoter Sam Silverman said tonight he has offered a $20,000 guarantee to French Middleweight Champion Marcel Cerdan to meet New England Middleweight Tiltist Al "Red" Priest of Cambridge, in a 10-round bout at Boston Garden, October 10.

Racing in Md. May Be Hard Hit By Fever Scare

Baltimore, Sept. 22 (AP).—President Harry A. Parr 3d of the Maryland Jockey Club is taking a dim view of resumption of horse racing in Maryland October 1 because of precautions invoked by New York against the spread of swamp fever.

The New York tracks will not accept any horses which race or are stabled outside the State. The swamp fever scare originated in New England where several thoroughbreds have died from the disease.

Both Parr and Dr. Arthur L. Brueckner, director of the Maryland livestock sanitary service, said they were surprised by the New York stand.

Parr, in addition, expressed worry that it would work unfavorably against Laurel, which opens October 1, and the subsequent meeting at Pimlico. The jockey club operates both tracks.

The jockey club president claimed the New York ruling will prevent owners from bringing horses to Maryland for certain stake races and then returning them to New York for the money events.

Kayoed Fighter Says Illegal Punch Did It

Sydney, Australia, Sept. 22 (U.P.). When Eddie Marcus, welterweight of San Diego, Calif., was knocked out tonight at Sydney Stadium, he gave an alibi that was new in the land of the kangaroo. He claimed an illegal "rabbit punch" had put him away.

Marcus, 145, was knocked out by Tommy Burns, 147, Australian welterweight champion, in the eighth round of their schedule 12-round bout.

The broad outlines of what the United States must do to save Europe — and the world — are clearly defined. This subject is discussed in this editorial appearing in McGraw-Hill Publications. It may be quoted or reprinted with or without credit mention.

This is the 61st of a series

WHILE WE DELAY—
Russia Drives for the Atlantic

IN THE STRUGGLE to keep western Europe west of the Iron Curtain it is later than you think. Unless the United States quickly mobilizes its own and other nations' resources, World War II will be lost as World War I was lost — by no economic follow-through.

Millions of people in western Europe, living in cold homes or no homes at all, face another winter of near starvation. Some countries are absolutely without dollars to buy abroad the food and fuel they need for survival. Others slide toward that desperate state.

In this welter of misery Russia grasps for dominion over all Europe. Everywhere, as cold and hunger deepen and as men begin to doubt America's determination to help, Russia turns on the pressure. In France the Communists drive to overthrow the Government. In Italy they do likewise. In Greece Russia kills the United Nations investigating commission. In Trieste Tito elbows us out of the way. In Germany and Austria the Soviet commanders alternately stymie and flout the Allied governments.

FACED WITH this bloodless attack, the leaders of western Europe and of the United States have not covered themselves with glory.

Look, for example, at what the sixteen European countries participating in the Paris meetings on the Marshall "plan" first proposed to the United States as a catalog of their needs. In the main it was simply an adding up — to $30 billion — of what the various countries thought they needed to keep going in the same old way at the same old stands. There was no real start on plans for the mutual aid by European states which is the essence of a successful recovery program . . . no real start on plans to knock down the barriers which divide European trade into hopelessly inadequate little pockets . . . no real plans to clean up currencies which deteriorate so fast nobody wants to work for them. In fact no plans to make people want to work.

Meanwhile, what have our leaders offered? Not much more than one fine commencement speech by General Marshall, outlining a good idea, and a couple of carloads of statistics, with more to come.

Not even a beginning has been made on the most crucial part of any European aid program — that of explaining to the American people what their part must be and why. It is true that not all the reports of all the statistical committees have been completed. They never will be. But it is also true that the broad outlines of what the United States must do to save Europe are already clear. And it is not simply to provide more dollars, although $12 to $16 billion more — the cost of 6 or 8 weeks fighting in World War II — may be required.

A far more basic requirement is leadership which will lift Europe out of the slough of despair and get recovery rolling. Without that leadership more billions for Europe will buy us nothing but more bitterness and remorse on both sides of the Atlantic.

WHAT ARE the ingredients of that leadership? Here are a few:

1. A bi-partisan program for European recovery.

It should be so thoroughly understood and so overwhelmingly supported by both parties that playing politics with it will be like selling military secrets to the enemy.

Truman and Vandenberg have failed miserably to develop and explain a complete program — one in which Europe and America can have full confidence. Nor have Taft and Dewey and other candidates for high office pledged that politics will stop at our shoreline. These men must speak out. To date Herbert Hoover alone has had the courage and vision to state a program.

2. A mobilization of American food supplies.

We must assure people at home and abroad that our crops, cut down by drought and heat, will be stretched to cover minimum European needs (with whatever help we can muster from other nations) without forcing still higher food prices here.

Some food experts are comfortably confident that the stretching can be done. But meatless and wheatless days, higher extraction of flour from wheat and similar voluntary conservation moves would make it surer. And they would demonstrate that a free country can mobilize itself to meet a very serious crisis.

3. An understanding that relief is one problem and recovery another.

Both problems must be solved. Relief emergencies must be met, some of them at once. But they must not black out the longer task of recovery. Italy illustrates the point. Italy, particularly the south, is flat broke. Help is needed right now to keep people from dying in the streets. But we must eventually do more than keep the Italian people alive. We must help them get back to useful work so that they can stand on their own feet.

4. A steady insistence on results — which means that Europe must find a way to make its people want to work.

In the U.S.S.R. they have a way to get things done. It is to liquidate those who do not work. In the U.S.A. we have a way to get things done. It is to create incentives to make people want to work. Western Europe, notably France and Britain, has fallen between two stools. It has socialized away the incentives, and it does not yet, thank heaven, enslave the laggards. We should make it crystal clear that we have no designs on the national "sovereignty" of others. But we should make it equally clear that we insist that those countries which receive our aid work hard enough to get results. To this end continued aid should be on an installment plan, each installment conditional on getting results. Otherwise more billions can easily disappear down the drain.

5. Insistence on all-out self-aid by European countries.

That is the constructive core of the Marshall idea — to help Europe to help itself. In his brilliant "Report on Germany" and how to get it "off the backs of the American taxpayer," Lewis H. Brown, Johns-Manville Chairman, shows how the export of only 10 million tons of coal a year from Britain to western Europe would speed industrial recovery of the Ruhr immeasurably. There are countless other cases where effort in one European country — or a group of countries — will break a big industrial bottleneck in another. We should insist that everything possible be done to see they are broken.

6. An agreement with Britain and France giving us authority in western Germany equal to our responsibility.

Britain is shifting to us most of the financial burden she has been carrying in the German occupation. Less directly we shall also be carrying much of the French occupation load too. We must have authority in the economic field commensurate with our responsibilities. Otherwise the management of western Germany can poison Anglo-American and Anglo-French relations in addition to wasting resources we could use to promote general European recovery.

It is truly said in the scriptures that the Lord loveth a cheerful giver. But it is not recorded anywhere that anyone, including the recipient, loves a soft-headed giver. Hence as a capstone any program of aid for Europe should have machinery assuring that only what is needed is sent; that what is sent does the job for which it is sent; and that arrangements are made for the recipients to pay back whatever they can.

THE AMERICAN PEOPLE should be told clearly by their leaders that there is no assurance that the best possible program of economic aid for Europe will do the job. The time is very late.

In France and Italy, as our help falters, the Communists right now are provoking strikes which will make the people's suffering more acute. They hope, of course, to overthrow the governments in both those countries and to seize control. If Communist dictatorships are clamped on France and Italy this fall, Russia and her satellites will have advanced to the Atlantic. The Iron Curtain will have moved 500 miles west — toward us.

Americans should be clearly told, therefore, that not to undertake an immediate program for the recovery of Europe is to bring closer the greatest possible national disaster — World War III.

Investigation In U. S. Job 'Influence' Backfires

Attorney McCann Charges Probe Was Born of Effort by AFL to 'Get' Him

By Jerry Kluttz

The investigation by the Senate Civil Service Committee into the use of "influence" to get promotions for several employes in the city post office appears to have about fizzled out.

In fact, at a hearing yesterday afternoon in the Senate Committee room, it backfired at several points.

Irving G. McCann, a Washington attorney who represented a small group of older postal employes in a protest against the promotion system, charged in effect at the hearing that the inquiry was inspired by American Federation of Labor interests that were out to get him.

The lawyer, who is on the legal staff of the House Labor Committee, recalled that he had had a recent "experience" with the AFL in Hollywood. He then asked Chairman Langer: "Am I to assist the AFL in trying to get something on McCann?" (He was referring to himself.)

The AFL executive council had demanded the removal of McCann from his committee post after he had punched Joseph Padway, AFL general counsel, during the House Labor Committee hearing on Hollywood labor jurisdictional disputes.

McCann said that George Riley, staff director of the Senate committee, had refused to tell him the nature of the hearing after he had been served with a subpena. He looked around the room and observed a number of AFL officials who were present. He assumed, he said, that they had been given advance information on the hearing. The House employe also pointed out that Riley was a former AFL employe.

He then demanded that Langer have each one present identify himself. Langer overruled his request.

However, as the hearing ended, Langer scolded Riley for not giving McCann full details of the investigation so he (McCann) could have every opportunity to prepare an answer. Further, he said that McCann would not be called on to testify until he had been given ample time to study the statements of witnesses.

But McCann indicated he would refuse to appear. He charged that Riley had begun the inquiry with a view toward starting criminal action against him. The House labor lawyer then added:

"But the testimony here today has been such that there is no reason to respond. I haven't been shown to have done anything that any decent and respectable citizen shouldn't have done."

The case was perhaps closed on that uncertain note—unless McCann agrees to appear.

The affair started about a year ago when four long-time clerks in the city post office decided to protest against the promotion system under which supervisors were appointed. The chairman of the group was James B. Robertson who told McCann, a personal friend, of their troubles.

McCann, who was a private lawyer at the time, volunteered to help. After several meetings with the postal group, McCann drafted a letter objecting to several points in the promotion system and sent it to Postmaster Vincent C. Burke. Later he discussed promotion policies with the Postmaster without results for his clients.

Robertson and other members of his group who testified emphasized that McCann had never asked for money for his services, and also that he dropped the case even before he went to work for the House Labor Committee. All the witnesses said they and others had "voluntarily chipped in" about $110 and had given it to McCann for his work.

At that point, Riley read a post-office regulation that prohibits employes from resorting to outside influence to gain promotions. Riley admitted the employes had a "just" grievance for being passed over for promotions, but he insisted they shouldn't have gone outside the department for help.

But Robertson and his fellow workers insisted they were protesting against the promotion system—and not trying to get promotions for themselves. In fact, one witness frankly testified that he had a nervous condition and that he did not feel competent to handle a supervisor job.

The promotion condition laid down by Postmaster Burke were the kind that would stir up employe protests. For example, no man can be promoted to a supervisory job if he has taken more than half of hi searned sick leave. And a postal employe is given only 10 days of sick leave a year in comparison with 15 days for other Government workers.

Also, Burke admitted discussing a rule with his top taff that would bar all employes who are 50 or more from beeing promoted to supervisory postions.

The four witnesses who testified yesterday had all been clerks from 22 to 31 years without promotions. And one of them, E. T. Hawkins, the 31-year-old man, had served without supervisory pay in a supervisor's job for nearly two years and he was given a 100 per cent efficiency rating on his work, but he was passed over and a younger man was given the better job.

Burke hotly denied that he had eever told McCann that the reason seniority wasn't used as the sole basis for making promotions was because so many Negroes would get teh supervisory jobs.

2 End Lives

Transit Fare Hike Hinted in Pay Demands

Company Asserts 35% Boost Could Mean Bankruptcy

Capital Transit Co. countered a union demand for a 35 per cent pay increase and other benefits yesterday by declaring it would mean bankruptcy or another boost here in streetcar and bus fares, and "maybe both."

Arbitration hearings on contract issues between the company and its union employes were opened by a three-man board yesterday morning at the Raleigh Hotel. The union involved in Division 689, Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America (AFL).

E. L. Oliver, union counsel, opened the hearings with a statement Capital Transit employes are "far behind" the rest of the Nation and other utility workers here in pay, vacation, sick leave and other working conditions.

The union is asking an across-the-board raise, a 5-day work week, sick leave with pay, two weeks' vacation after a year's service and three weeks after 10 years, a reduction in the working time required for vacations from 200 to 150 days, eight holidays, and a differential for night work.

CTC President E. D. Merill told the board, headed by Dr. George W. Taylor, former War Labor Board chairman, that the demands mean "the company is asked either to bankrupt itself or charge much higher rates to the public—maybe both . . ."

8700 Enroll At U. of Md., Gain of 2000

A record enrollment of 8700, which is 2000 more than last year, was reported yesterday as the University of Maryland began its new scholastic year. The figures reported were for College Park only and do not include an estimated 2500 in the Baltimore professional schools.

Approximately 2300 freshmen reported for classes yesterday as a result of registration held last week, according to Miss Alma H. Preinkert, registrar.

The first day was passed principally in preparing schedules and getting acquainted, but a full schedule of classes begins today. Classes will begin at 8 a. m. and continue until 6 p. m.

The record student body has added to the serious parking problem at the university. Faculty and student cars have been ordered parked in special parking lots, but these were overflowing yesterday.

University police warned yesterday that cars parked illegally would be towed away to a Berwyn garage and that a fee of $3 would be charged for repossession. More than 40 cars have been towed away so far and 300 motorists have been warned, police said.

Greenbelt Expects 1500 At Polls

Run-Off Election To Fill 4 Seats In Council Today; Polls Open 7 to 7

More than 1500 persons are expected to vote today in the Greenbelt, Md., runoff election to fill the four remaining seats on its town council.

Polls in the fire house will be open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m.

Thomas J. Canning was the only candidate in a field of 19 to receive the majority vote necessary for election in last Tuesday's regular voting.

With the withdrawal Sunday of Mayor George F. Bauer, only seven of the next highest eight candidates remin in the race. His withdrawal was too late for his name to be omitted from the ballot, but he has requested that no votes be cast for him.

Original Issue Superseded

The original campaign issue over the admission of unlimited private business enterprises into the community appeared swept into the background over the weekend following charges of mismanagement of funds made against Town Manager James T. Gobbel. The accusation was made by Bauer and Mrs. Mabel Kandler, two treasurer.

As a result of the charges, made verbally in a special council meeting Friday night and reiterated in sworn statements Sunday, the remaining candidates split along pro-Gobbel and anti-Gobbel lines.

The remnants of Bauer's Greenbelt Improvement Association slate, Benjamin P. Goldfaden, Albert Schaffer and George Eshbaugh, are supporting the mayor in his attack on Gobbel. Goldfaden, a former recreation director for the town who has since accepted a position in the Prince Georges County school system, accused the town manager of dereliction of duty at the special council session.

Four Highest Listed

The candidates supported by the Committee for Better Government, of which Canning was one, are Mrs. Elizabeth Harrington, Councilman Allen D. Morrison, Frank J. Lastner and David M. Granahan. These four finished highest of the candidates failing to obtain a clear majority last Tuesday, Mrs. Harrington missing by 35 votes.

Bauer, in withdrawing, said he wanted to be free of any political implications in making his sworn charges against Gobbel. He finished eighth in the regular balloting, 330 votes behind Canning.

The town manager was accused of causing Mrs. Kandler to pay three town employes, including himself, at a rate higher than that authorized by the council in approving the 1947 budget.

Gobbel denied he had ordered any illegal expenditures or that he had ever received any more money than was legally due him.

Cooperatives Have Partisans

In the original campaign issue over private enterprise, the Committee for Better Government favored the present cooperative setup over the introduction of unlimited private business. Opening of the town to private enterprise, on the other hand, was advocated by the Greenbelt Improvement Association, which voiced dissatisfaction with the cooperative system.

Yesterday, a new voice was added to those condemning Gobbel when Robert Dodge, a town policeman, declared Gobbel had failed to follow up charges made by him against Police Chief George Panagoulis last August.

At that time Dodge said he accused the chief in his conversation with Gobbel of "dereliction of duty and lack of ability to cope with the duties of his position." Conditions in the police force were "unbearable," he said.

Canning, who was refused a seat on the council at the special session by Bauer, stated at that time that the new council would investigate any charges brought before it after it took office. In accordance with the custom of naming the condidate receiving the most votes as mayor, Canning is expected to assume that post when the new council is sworn in.

Skeleton Put in Jail

Baltimore, Sept. 22 (A.P.).—Uncle George, an elderly skeleton, was back home today—in the cellar this time—after spending a night in jail for disturbing the peace of mind of at least two early morning passersby.

About 3 a. m. Sunday morning, playful companions of John S. Hartlove, who is keeping Uncle George for a friend, seaten the dressed skeleton on a chair in front of the house. That upset a neighbor so much he didn't stop running until reaching the district police station. Uncle George was carried off in a police car to headquarters.

Hartlove paid $25 and took George back home to his street-side armchair. Next thing, another passerby summoned police who persuaded Hartlove to put him out of sight for keeps.

3 Va. Bridge Jobs Pushed at Record Pace

Richmond, Va., Sept. 22 (A.P.).—The State Highway Department said today that Virginia bridge builders are breaking construction records in an effort to complete work on three major projects.

With only about three months remaining before snow and ice in southwest Virginia will force a slowdown on construction activities, contractors are rushing work on the New River bridge at Radford, the Kumis overpass on Route 11 near Salem, and a large span over the south fork of the Shenandoah River on Route 211 in Page County.

In a summary of bridge building activities, the department said work on the New River span on Route 11 at Radford was 70 per cent complete. R. K. Williams, Richmond contractor, is handling the substructure work on a bid of $275,856. Work should be completed by late November, the department said.

Wiley N. Jackson Company, Inc., and Ralph E. Mills of Roanoke have the contract for $723,237 in work on Route 11 six miles west of Salem. The four-lane bridge will span the Roanoke River and the Virginian Railway. The department said the contractors have completed most of the foundation work and hope to finish the whole job before winter weather halts them.

Only the addition of railings and other final details remain before the new bridge on Route 211 in Page can be opened to traffic, the department said. Echols Brothers, Inc., of Staunton, started on the $350,000 job in April, 1946.

83,638 Enrolled At Public Schools

48,894 in Grades, 18,020 in Junior High; Registration Is Less Than That of Last Year

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

The teacher held up a picture and asked the class of 6-year-olds what it was.

"Little Black Sambo," they shouted back.

School had begun for first-graders at the Park View School, Warder and Newton sts. nw.

Throughout the city yesterday 83,638 students enrolled in classes after a three-month vacation.

Enrollment figures showed 48,894 in the elementary grades; 18,020 in junior high school; 1619 in the vocational schools; 14,324 in the high schools, and 781 in the two teachers' colleges.

With the recognition of "Little Black Sambo" the serious business of education started for the 20 first-graders at Park View.

The picture shown by Mrs. Osceola C. Joiner, first grade teacher at Park View, established the children as a group. They had the common experience of knowing "Little Black Sambo" and his story.

An Apple for Teacher

Among the first graders was 6-year-old Lester Brodsky of 615 Newton pl. nw. He carried his pet turtle and an apple for his teacher when he arrived at Park View yesterday morning.

But he wept bitterly when he learned he would have to leave the kindergarten which he attended last year and move up to the first grade.

Before the bell rang for the 10:30 a. m. recess, Lester decided he liked his new teacher, the new room and new classmates just fine. He was part of the group.

Mrs. Jane Frost Hilder, guidance teacher for the fifth division which includes the Park View School, explained that teachers must establish this group feeling before they can begin to teach the children. All activities, including games, will be directed toward that object in the weeks to come, she said.

"Parents frequently come to us a few weeks after the opening of school and ask why their child isn't reading yet," Mrs. Hilder said. "Actually it may be January or February before a first grader will read from a book.

While first grade experiences were new to Lester, they are an old story to his teacher.

Returns After 7 Years

Mrs. Joiner, who formerly taught in Alabama, spent her first day in a schoolroom after a seven-year absence as a Government worker.

"I'm back in teaching because that is what I like most to do," Mrs. Joiner said. The first-day program included giving the children a physical examination, conducting language and drawing lessons and game periods.

At the 24-room Park View School, the principal, Mrs. Roberta Barnes, registered nearly 300 children. Ten years ago the school had an enrollment of a thousand. Population shifts have cut down the number of students giving them what is rare in District schools—enough room.

City-wide registration figures showed school enrollment down over the same period last year when 84,265 students registered. Not yet counted in yesterday's totals were students of the two veterans' schools.

Registration yesterday in white schools was 46,650, as compared with 47,671 a year ago, and in Negro schools 37,008, compared with 36,594 of 1946.

Official Denies China Leans Toward Russia

Nanking, Sept. 22 (A.P.).—Recent Chinese "hints" that this country might move closer to Russia unless the United States provided greater aid were only "expressions of impatience," a high official declared today.

"China has not changed her foreign policy, nor does she intend to," he said.

He stated a battle still was raging between one group opposed to accepting an American aid "project," insisting on a lump-sum instead, and another which held that China's situation was so serious she could not quibble.

In School Budget

New Lockers Sought for Central High

(Second of a series)

Students at Central High School have a proprietary interest in the 32-million-dollar school budget which has been proposed by the District Board of Education.

For students will benefit to the extent of 1000 new lockers, which are designed to replace the old steel cabinets in use since the building was erected in 1916. Students also will derive benefit from another appropriation of $24,000 requested in the budget to install new sound-movie equipment in the school auditorium. Also earmarked for Central High School is a $17,000 appropriation which Central would divide with Dunbar High School for installation of showers.

Other Budget Details

Other school budget details of additional features proposed for individual schools follow:

Crummell School—$50,000 asked to buy more playground space for Crummell, also money to hire a kindergarten teacher and other personnel next fall. Present plans call for starting next year to build a $115,000 temporary addition with eight rooms for the Crummell School. The money is all on hand.

Dunbar High—There are assorted items in the budget requests for Dunbar. They include:

For hiring another assistant principal next September 1, $3750. The school had 1527 students last year, and school rules say there should be two assistant principals when the enrollment is more than 1200.

For hiring a home economic teacher, $3500 and for installing modern foods and clothing laboratory equipment for home economics classes, $6140.

For movie and stage equipment in the auditorium, $12,000; for 1200 pupils' lockers to replace old ones, $12,000; for physics laboratory equipment, $12,000; for cafeteria improvements, $7200; for a central sound system, $5805, and for equipping a new library, $4100.

Eastern High

Eastern High—A total of 32,450 was asked for new equipment for the auditorium, foods and clothing laboratories, child care laboratory and model apartment, and another $8520 for home economics equipment.

Francis Junior High—A fund of $29,360 was asked for equipment in the electric, metal, wood and print shops. What the school has is worn out after 20 years' use.

Franklin Administration Building—A $15,000 new elevator was asked because the one there now doesn't work, and it's a long climb to the third floor.

Garfield School—$17,000 asked to go with $15,000 appropriated two years ago for buying land needed for a 12-room addition.

Garnet-Patterson Junior High—The board asked $13,860 for 1200 new pupils' lockers and new electric shop equipment.

Giddings School—$75,000 asked to buy additional land for a 16-room addition that would replace both the original 60-year-old eight-room Giddings unit, and also the 12-room Lincoln school. The latter, built in 1871, was first nominated for abandonment in 1908. The recommendation came from a schoolhouse commission appointed by Congress.

Hine Junior High—A $165,000 appropriation was asked to go with earlier grants totaling $215,000 to complete purchase of land at 7th and C sts. se. for a new Hine Junior High School.

Jackson Elementary—The present heating system doesn't work properly and $5200 was aked to put in a new boiler.

Janney School—The proposed budget calls for $30,000 to buy a site for a new elementary school near Massachusetts ave. and Fordham rd. nw. Both the two nearest schools, Janney and Mann, are more than a mile from the proposed new school.

Kimball Elementary—The board asked for the last $75,000 needed to finish the $525,000 Kimball School addition. One of the two white elementary schools on part time last year, Kimball had 254 of its 578 pupils in double-shift classes. The addition would give another eight classrooms, assembly hall-gymnasium, and recreation facilities. The project has been advertised for bids. Budget estimates also call for hiring custodial help next year to take care of the new addition.

Logan School—The proposed 8-room Logan addition, to cost $498,000, has been advertised for bids, and the school board's budget asked funds to man the addition when school opens next fall.

Macfarland Junior High—The requests include $5500 for chairs and other auditorium equipment to go with the requested $15,000 new inclined auditorium floor.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—John M. Huff, director of public health, said today the permits of 17 food-handling establishments here have been revoked in a campaign against unsanitary conditions.

He asked the public to cooperate in continuing the drive by calling attention to such evidences of uncleanness as lipstick on glasses or dirty dishes and utensils.

"Most operators will be glad to have such things brought to their attention," Huff said. "If a proprietor gets offended by such a comment from a customer, he should be run out of town."

Brouillette Murder Trial Set To Start Today in Maryland

Leonardtown, Md., Sept. 22 (Spl.).—Joseph Daniel Brouillette, 22-year-old seaman, will go on trial here tomorrow for the murder of Mrs. Julia Katona, former Washington Government girl.

Brouillette pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in the St. Mary's County Circuit Court last Thursday afternoon. He requested a jury trial, which is scheduled to start at the courthouse at 9:30 this morning.

The young Navy cook is accused of beating and strangling the young mother of 8-year-old twins in a weekend cabin adjoining her home at nearby Tall Timbers, Md.

Lieut. Frank Katona, who is stationed at the Patuxent River Naval Air Station where Broudette is also assigned, found his wife's body in the cabin July 23 when he returned from a 24-hour-duty tour at the base where he is a flight engineer.

Navy authorities at Patuxent turned Brouillette over to civil authorities within four hours after the finding of the body. They quoted him as saying that he had joined Mrs. Katona and four others in a penny-ante poker game at the cabin.

Brouillette was linked to the crime by a Navy ring found on the scene, but ownership of the ring has not been admitted by the suspect. The young sailor had been on liberty at the time, occupying a cabin five doors from the murder scene. He checked back into his barracks at 9 a. m. the following day.

Expected to be at the trial today are Brouillette's wife, Marjorie Anne, a former Washington resident and bride of only five months, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jules Brouillette of Manchester, N. H.

Attorney for Brouillette is State Senator Jaul J. Bailey, who said he expected the trial "would be finished in a day," but refused to elaborate. States Attorney C. Henry Camalier will direct the prosecution.

Maryland to Rule Today on Byrd's Building Program

Baltimore, Sept. 22 (AP).—Attorney General Hall Hammond announced today he would have a formal opinion on the University of Maryland's building program—including a stadium—ready for a meeting of the board of public works tomorrow.

Governor Lane said the meeting would be held at his executive offices here in order to clean up the agenda left from the meeting two weeks ago.

The $2,350,000 building program was proposed by Dr. H. C. Byrd, university president. Byrd said the plan, which would include a stadium, a physical education building, a chapel, and auditorium and a swimming pool, could be financed without cost to the State.

The board asked the attorney general to rule on the scheme to use carry-over funds, gate receipts and student fees.

Line Straddlin Plan of Cultists Foils Policemen

St. Charles, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—Fifty cultists who last night held their meeting on the Virginia-Kentucky border despite Virginia's anti-snake handling law were wondering today whether future such gatherings would be as successful as the first one.

Last night, the cultists, led by the Rev. Oscar Hutton, of St. Charles, went to a mountain top where they were certain they could find a marker setting the line between the two states.

When Kentucky highway patrolmen visited the scene of the gathering, the cultists were in session on the Virginia side. And when Virginia troopers arrived at the meeting, the snake-handlers were on the Kentucky side of the line. The troopers took no action.

The "line straddling" idea gained widespread publicity throughout this area. Hutton said plans for a similar meeting were indefinite.

U. of Va. Plans To Inaugurate Darden Oct. 1

Charlottsville, Va., Sept. 22 (AP). Colgate W. Darden, jr., will be inauguated president of the University of Virginia on the morning of Wednesday, October 1, in an outdoor ceremony on the historic lawn of the institution from which he was graduated in 1922.

Darden, former Governor of Virginia, last September personally halted a powerful movement that would have swept him into a United States Senate seat as successor to the late Senator Carter Glass. At that time it was believed that he would prefer the university presidency to the Senate.

Last June, Darden officially became university president, succeeding Dr. John Lloyd Newcomb, who retired to private life after 42 years' association with the university. Darden's inauguration is taking the place on the university calendar of the fall convocation, which would ordinarily open the 1947-48 session.

The inaugural exercises will be held on a removable stage loaned by the Virginia Music Festival. In the event of bad weather, the exercises will be held in the Memorial Gymnasium.

The Philadelphia Orchestra, conducted by Eugene Ormandy, will give a concert as the concluding feature of the ceremonies.

Sir Alfred Zimmern, distinguished British educator and author and professor emeritus of Oxford University, will deliver the principal address at the inauguration. Darden, who will follow Sir Alfred on the program, will tell of his plans for the development of the university.

The traditional and colorful academic profession will proceed down the lawn beginning at 10:30 o'clock. Edward R. Stettinius, jr., will preside as rector of the university, and will formally induct President Darden into office. Gov. William Tuck, Darden's successor as governor, will speak on behalf of the Commonwealth of Virginia, and Bishop William A. Brown will pronounce the invocation.

Three Tenants Named to Rent Control Board

Three tenants were nominated yesterday by Gov. William M. Tuck of Virginia to the Alexandria-Arlington Rent Control Advisory Board.

The Governor noted in a letter to Federal Housing Expediter Frank R. Creedon that protests had been made to Federal authorities concerning membership of the board. It had been argued that more tenants should be added to balance the number of board members who own real estate.

As reported by The Washington Post September 13, the first seven nominations did not include a single tenant representative. All either owned or were buying homes. As a result, they would not be affected by an increase in rent ceilings or other changes in the rent control.

Md. Situation Similar

A similar situation prevails on the Montgomery-Prince Georges, Md., board. None of the six members is a tenant. Gov. William P. Lane of Maryland has said, however, that he would name additional persons in line with a letter from Creedon pointing out that the present board is not adequately "representative."

The three new nominees to the Alexandria-Arlington board are:

1. S. Cooper Dawson, jr., a tenant at 415 Jefferson st., Alexandria. Dawson is manager of the Penn Daw Hotel in Alexandria. He said yesterday he has no definite ideas as yet on the rent control problem in his area:

2. Bennett W. King of Old Lee Highway, Fairfax, Va. A tenant for the past four years and president of the Fairfax Gas & Supply Co. He thinks all controls were lifted too soon after the war, and in order to bring rents into balance with other prices, rent ceilings should be raised "slightly."

Reid Gives Views

3. Conrad Reid of 103 George Mason dr., Arlington. He has been a tenant fo rthe last 10 years and is employed by the Interstate Commerce Comission in Washington. He would not express any officials views, but as a "private individual," he said "we couldn't do more to add to inflation than by taking rent controls off."

The minimum number of members who may serve on a rent control advisory board is five, but there is no required maximum.

Court Will Get Fairfax Recount Result Tomorrow

Recapitulated returns of Fairfax County's contested Democratic primary vote for selection of a House of Delegates nominee will be submitted to a special three-judge court tomorrow at 10 a. m. at Fairfax Courthouse.

In accordance with a court order handed down September 9, a recount of ballots has been supervised by a three-man committee composed of Mark Turner, Charles Shaughnessy and T. J. Stockton, to settle a tie vote between State Delegate Edwin Lynch and his opponent, Robert J. McCandlish. Each candidate, according to the official returns, received 2853 ballots.

The recount has been completed, but the three-man committee is under order from the court to reveal no details of the recapitulation until the returns are presented to the court. Pending court action to settle the tie, Lynch was chosen as the nominee through a drawing conducted by the State Board of Elections, but its action can be superseded if a recount establishes the other candidate as the winner.

In Memoriam

MITCHELL, MINNIE L. On September 23, 1946.
A mother who gave me the best of her life,
Who cherished my secrets, my sorrows, my strife;
Who taught me to love and also to pray,
Oh, dear mother in heaven, God bless you today.
Your life was unselfish, for others you lived;
Not for what you received, but for what you could give.
Just a loving thought, just a silent tear,
Just a beautiful memory of one I love so dear.
YOUR DAUGHTER, JACK.

La Hawes Sets Style

Not Only Fish Are Caught in A Minnow Bag

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

"WOMEN DO THE CWAZIEST THINGS!"—to paraphrase that deliciously cockeyed motion picture announcer. Take Elizabeth Hawes, for instance, former free-wheeling New York dressmaker, who ripped to ribbons her profession in an opus entitled "Fashion Is Spinach." Miss Hawes recently emerged from a Virgin Islands hideout where she's been writing a book. Title and subject are still secret but it's sure to be controversial because La Hawes looks so smug.

One glance at the crowded boulevards and Miss Hawes dubbed Manhattan the "City of Sagging Hemlines." Then, to bolster her wardrobe marched down to Abercrombie & Fitch, bought herself a new pocketbook. It's a canvas minnow bag, net and all, and most capacious!

Abercrombie & Fitch report, she says, a great run on wicker creels. Mystified at first, they discovered 'teen-age girls were taking them back to school as handbags.

Duck-Hunter Style

THE MARQUISE DE ZAHARA is back in Washington for a too brief visit. The former Betty Byrne, now the widow of a Spanish diplomat, looks lovelier than ever with her ash-blond hair braided coronet-wise atop her head.

She's returning to England in a few weeks and, as precaution against heatless houses, the Marquise is taking along a pair of fur-lined pants! This luxurious garment wasn't dreamed up by Schiaparelli or Dior, it's merely what the well dressed duck hunter wears squatting in a blind on an icy predawn.

The Marquise was gifted with this useful trifle at a cocktail party at the George Abells. Which proves there's some useful purpose after all in Washington's much criticized Martini routes.

Another Blond Wanamaker?

THE RODMAN WANAMAKERS were officially divorced a few days ago. Blond Beatrice Patterson Wanamaker, once one of the Main Line's beauties, will be back in Washington shortly. While Roddy was in the Navy she had a wartime job here, enjoyed it so much that she's decided to settle more or less permanently.

Meanwhile Roddy is trembling on the brink of a third matrimonial venture. This time the bride-to-be is Mrs. Brookfield Van Rensselaer, former wife of Charles Van Rensselaer.

For years everyone believed that Adele Van Rensselaer would marry Freddie Lewisohn, brother of Mrs. Martin Vogel, and summertimes one of the Riviera's outstanding hosts. But, for once, the gossips were wrong!

Adele, who's sweet, slim as a mannequin, was one of the Riviera belles in prewar days. You'd never guess it but Adele was a star water skiier and on gala nights at Cannes skiied behind a speed boat, holding a torch in one hand, the aquaplane guide ropes in another.

Incidentally, Roddy's first wife was Alix Devereaux, another Philadelphia beauty as brunette as Bea and Adele are blonde!

Those Interesting Langhornes

VIRGINIA'S LADY ASTOR, who's chatelaine of Cliveden, one of England's most spectacular estates, floats through life utterly uninhibited, minus as much as the tiniest complex. Her Ladyship says what she wants, does what she wants.

Returning from a summer visit to Mirador, her family's ancestral place in Virginia, she hastened to offer it to Princess Elizabeth as a honeymoon spot. The only catch was that Mirador doesn't belong to Lady Astor but to her niece, Mrs. Nancy Tree of London, who lets all Langhornes visit there. Nancy Tree, hearing of her aunt's generous "offer" to the royal family, hastily dispatched a telegram.

"That was a lovely gesture," wire Nancy "I've just cabled President Truman and offered him Cliveden."

Caroline Forbes Is Christened

From London comes word of the christening of Caroline Serena Forbes, infant daughter of Major Hamish Forbes, Welsh Guard, and Mrs. Forbes, which took place September 16 at Guards' Chapel, London. Canon Hannay, better known as George A. Birmingham, author, officiated at the ceremony.

Mrs. Forbes is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Underwood, formerly of Washington and New York. She served during the war at the British Embassy here and with the British Red Cross in Italy.

Godparents for the baby were the Countess of Bradford, Mrs. John Drexel of Newport; Miss Mary Edmondstone, granddaughter of Sir Archibald Edmondstone; the Earl of Clarendon, who is Lord Chamberlain to King George VI, and James McDonnell, son of the Earl and Countess of Antrim.

Major Forbes was graduated from Lawrenceville School.

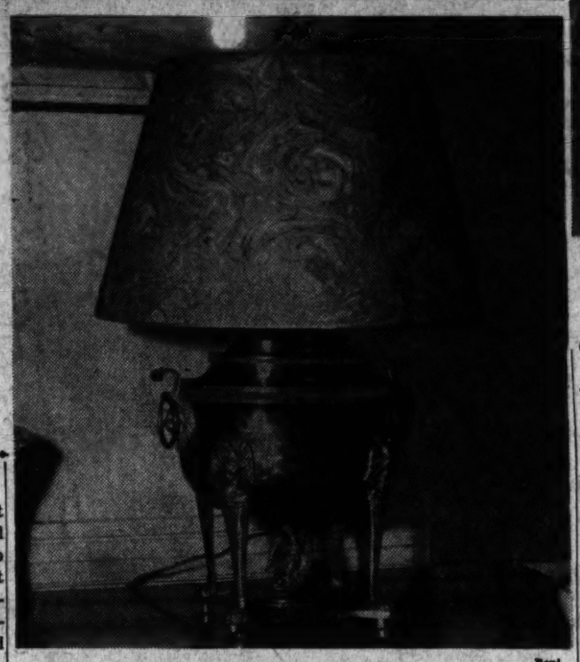
Modern Treasure Hunters

MRS. MARGUERITE GLOVER (left) and Mrs. Jean Macgregor Frear have collected eighteenth century antiques from all over Europe and America since they formed their partnership as "The Questers"

THESE pieces of eighteenth century Faience—a type of earthenware glazed to look as much like enamel as possible—come from various countries of Europe. On the top shelf, the tulip vases on each end are from Belgium, the bullfighter and bull (a toothpick holder!) from Portugal, and the plate from Italy. On the lower shelf are (left) a blue and white hanging plaque from France, peasant figurines from Hungary, a French flagon with pewter top (made at Moustier under Fouque), and a blue, white, and yellow bowl from St. Omer, France



A REGENCY hot water urn of brass and copper was used to make this lamp seen in The Questers' collection. The shade is of marbelized paper

A Clean Mop

The floor mop will stand just so much work and cleaning, and then it requires a bath itself to really be of much value as a dirt collector. Either a bath in gasoline or hot, sudsy water, followed by a thorough drying, and then a sprinkling of furniture polish through its fibers will result in a satisfactory cleaning.

'Questers' Scour the World For the Rare and Beautiful

By Lucia Brown

"WHY DOESN'T somebody start a service—"

How many times have you heard that phrase? Marguerite Glover and Jean Macgregor Frear had heard it often, but never became really interested until one day an antique dealer finished it by saying:

"... A service to locate rare things that decorators or antique dealers particularly need at the moment?"

In answer to his query, the two Washington women formed "The Questers," a firm that has specialized for nine years now in searching out fine antiques from the four corners of the earth.

Today, their collection of eighteenth century glass, furniture, porcelain, silver and china—located in a charming Georgetown house—is one of the finest in the city. And their firm has expanded its business until it sells not only to decorators and dealers, on special request, but to the general public as well.

Designed Violet Bed

Mrs. Frear, who runs the Washington shop while Mrs. Glover does the buying, is a talented interior decorator. She has done stage designing, too, and once, on 24-hour notice, made a violet bed for Billie Burke to wake up in for a Ziegfeld production.

Trained at the Pratt Institute in New York, she worked for some time with Paul Chalfin at Marshall Field's in Chicago, planning and decorating outstanding houses in Palm Beach and other cities.

After her marriage, she moved with her husband to Washington and gave up her career for a time. Later she started the interior decorating department of the Washington branch of the Symons Galleries of New York. Mrs. Glover, whom she had known in Mexico as the wife of a diplomat, was in charge of antiques for the branch here.

Changeable Customers

It was several years later—and Mrs. Glover had moved to New York—when they decided to become "The Questers." At first, their searches were limited to particular pieces of furniture, porcelain, or glass that someone wanted and hadn't been able to locate. Sometimes they found, however, that after an exhaustive "treasure hunt," the customer would change his mind about needing the object. So they changed the nature of their business. Today, they first find the antiques, then the customers.

Since the end of the war, Mrs. Glover has made four buying trips to Europe. She has purchased beautiful things in England, Scotland, Wales, Holland, Denmark and Sweden. Buying abroad has its difficulties now, she says, because of inflation and the active market for old furniture in Europe.

Tea Scheduled

There are early American things in the shop, too. Practically everything is eighteenth century. Mrs. Frear and Mrs. Glover feel that the furniture of that period is much better adapted to modern living than the heavier antiques of some other eras.

On October 8, The Questers' new home—an eighteenth century house, painted a soft gray outside with chartreuse shutters—will be the scene of a tea for a number of invited guests. Visitors will be shown the collectors' room on the second floor, the pewter room, lamp and print room, and porcelain and glass treasures.

It will be next spring, though, before one feature of the place can be enjoyed in all its beauty. This is the garden in the back, which is being planned and planted by Mrs. Frear with all the enthusiasm and artistry she once lavished on that violet bed of ostrich feathers, beads, and purple lame for the great Ziegfeld.

Breathe Deeply to Develop Right Curves

By Ida Jean Kain

There is no such thing in fashion's bright lexicon as a "boyish form." Feminine curves are well defined.

Well, take a deep breath, girls, and let's go after curves. The formula is to learn to breathe deeper, to straighten up your shoulders, tone the pectoral muscles and add six to a dozen pounds, if needed.

Of course, when the breasts are normally small, that can't be changed. But you do not have to put up with underdeveloped or sagging, or a plucked-chicken look across the chest and collarbones.

To begin with, anyone with a shallow chest is a shallow breather, so one remedy is to learn to breathe properly with the diaphragm. That doesn't mean to stand by an open window and take a few quick whiffs of fresh air. You can't store oxygen, or increase the capacity that way. You have to create a demand for more oxygen, through exercise, then breathe correctly so as to get the most benefits. As you stand by the window, stretch your arms above your head and then swing them down in a circular movement, slowly and rhythmically, stretching up and circling down, 6 to 12 times. This coaxes the shoulders into line, lifts the ribs and makes deep breathing natural.

Try 'Play Nap' When Child Won't Sleep

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

WHEN the mother comes to accept the nap as a regular event, she is due for an eye-opener. Some fine day, when the child is about 3 years of age, she will find him hammering at the door demanding to be let out because he doesn't want to sleep.

If told that he must and to lie down and be quiet, he creates a real rumpus. Angry at his incarceration and wanting to be revengeful, he spends his time tearing his chest drawers apart and scattering their contents around the floor. When this is done he throws his toys around, making furious noises the while to indicate his refusal to accept this old and familiar ceremony.

Just as you can't make a horse drink though led to water, neither can you make a child sleep, despite his nearness to the bed. But you can sell him on the idea of a rest period or as Arnold Gesell calls it, "a play nap," and thus set up again a situation that is hospitable to sleep.

HE SHOULD be assured he doesn't need to sleep, if he doesn't feel like it. He can get out of bed and play if he wishes. But since this is a rest period, it will be better if his clothes are removed, the shades down and be as quiet as possible. Show him the clock and indicate on it where the hands will be when he can get up from his play nap.

Children easily fall into the moods we suggest. This is the quiet time and if the mother talks in low tones, keeps the house quiet, even lies down for a rest herself, she will find the child quite willing to stay some allotted time in his bedroom.

He may not be able to sleep, for the capacity to sleep is a diminishing one. But, he can play quietly in his bed or on the floor, be spared the excitement of active play alone or with other children and be ready in an hour or longer to be dressed and made ready for the afternoon.

Rust Stains in Wool

Rust stains in woolen material are not easy to remove because wool has a pronounced affinity for several metals, including iron. It often helps to remove difficult stains if a little sodium sulphite is added to the cleaning solution, for it makes the iron particles more soluble.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Child, 11, Finds Out-of-Town Guests in Aunt's Home, and When They Suggest Calling Upon Her Mother, She Quickly Demurs; Aunt Gets Furious

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like your opinion of my mother's contribution to an incident that occurred recently at our house. Guests had arrived from a distant city. We hadn't seen them for nine years and they were here for only a few hours.

As we sat talking, a young cousin of ours came in. She is 11 years old and lives nearby. After general greetings, one guest suggested going to call on the mother, whose home is a few doors away.

When Betsy, the cousin, heard this, she blurted out, "There's a cleaning woman at the house now and it's in a mess. Couldn't you come some other time?" Whereupon mother turned on Betsy and called her a "stupid animal." Then she told her before the company that she had "absolutely no business saying such a thing."

Did mother do wrong? The tactlessness of the child was evident; but was mother's behavior as bad or worse, coming from a grown-up? E. J.

Child's Remark Was Blameless

DEAR E. J.: Your mother's behavior was terrible. Betsy seems a perfect lady by contrast. There was nothing stupid or intentionally offensive about her hasty exclamation that a cleaning woman had the house upset—and couldn't the company call another time.

Since she was the only spokesman present from her household, and since her exclamation implied private knowledge that her mother was in no mood or condition to roll out the red carpet for unexpected guests, it seems to me she showed remarkable presence of mind for a child of her age.

I'm sure her spontaneous thought was to spare her mother's feelings without offending the would-be visitor,—hence her impromptu, rather well rounded statement (for an 11-year-old), which struck a nice balance between apologetic turn-down and courteous rain-check.

Possibly she did sound a bit officious for her years, if you choose to take that view; but even so, there was no excuse or justification for your mother's vituperative outburst, which violated every tenet of good sense and good breeding and must have shocked the audience stiff, assuming their sensibilities are approximately normal.

Woman's Rage Not Justified

THE QUESTION is why she lashed out so violently at Betsy? Her attack signifies terrific pent-up anxiety, which tends to explode without rhyme or reason in times of great personal stress.

Thus it occurs to me that possibly your mother was already fit to be tied with mortification at having been caught by the guests without her best foot forward, when Betsy blundered in to say a few words which seemed—from your mother's distrait view—to put the whole family in a bad light.

In any event, whatever the rationale of her outrageous bad manners, the cause of her explosion was strictly in herself. It cannot reasonably be attributed to anything Betsy did or said. And before she lambasts Betsy again, let her ask herself what kind of example she is giving the child on the score of genteel deportment. M. H.

All my life

As long as I am on this earth . . . I hope that I shall be . . . Of service to my fellow-man . . . And my community . . . I hope that I shall give my best . . . In everything I do . . . And strive each day in every way . . . To be sincere and true . . . For there is nothing to be gained . . . From selfishness and greed . . . And there is nothing I would have . . . Beyond my daily need . . . I only want the food and clothes . . . That keep my body well . . . And have the strength to conquer fear . . . And every doubt dispel . . . I want to lend a helping hand . . . And give good will and cheer . . . And try to live a better life . . . As long as I am here.

Introducing—

Harris & Ewing

MRS. HARRIS ELLSWORTH

Mrs. Ellsworth, Delta Gamma Leader, Is Attractive 'Jill of All Trades'

This is another of a series of articles introducing the club presidents of Washington and vicinity.

NEWSPAPERWOMAN . . . advertising salesman . . . radio station manager . . . artist of the airwaves . . . Red Cross organizer . . . successful wife and mother . . . that's petite, brown-eyed Mrs. Harris Ellsworth, newly installed president of Washington Alumnae Chapter of Delta Gamma, international collegiate fraternity.

Wife of the Congressman from Oregon's Fourth District, friendly, auburn-haired Helen Ellsworth has been a familiar figure in Washington since 1942 when her husband first took his seat in Congress and she headed the 78th Club.

A native Californian—she was born in San Jose—Helen Dougherty grew up with a yen for newspaper work and studied for it at the University of Oregon. Here she met and fell in love with a fellow journalism student, Harris Ellsworth, whom she married in 1923.

BESIDES KEEPING house and raising a family of two daughters, Helen Ellsworth found time to help her publisher-husband with their Roseburg (Oreg.) News-Review, which they acquired in 1929. Twelve years ago the Ellsworths bought a radio station. Neither of them knew much about running it, but with her usual enthusiasm Helen plunged into its management.

"That station was really my baby," she smiles reminiscently.

Few trained workers were available at the time but Mrs. Ellsworth loved every phase of the job. She sold advertising . . . scheduled programs . . . pinch-hit as pianist . . . wrote and read scripts . . . acted in radio plays . . . filled in any emergency—on the air or "backstage." Her favorite chore was telling children's stories over the air—a program she'd like to continue "just to keep my finger in the pie," but the duties of a Congressman's wife have kept her pretty busy.

DURING THE WAR she turned her energies to Red Cross work and served as commander of the Motor Corps in Oregon, organizing five groups to carry out the work in her county.

A true Westerner, Helen Ellsworth loves the outdoor life and recent summers in Oregon are much too short to get in all the swimming she'd like. Following in their mother's footsteps, both daughters have studied journalism at the University of Oregon and are members of Theta Sigma Phi, national honorary journalism fraternity. Blonde Mary Margaret has graduated, vivacious Jane is entering her senior year.

With their new president's reputation for "getting things done," local Delta Gammas are figuratively rolling up their sleeves in readiness for an ambitious 1947-48 program of social service and community welfare projects.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Can you tell me how to combat mold and silverfish which have gotten into my books recently? M. B.

Brush the books off well out of doors so as not to scatter the mold spores in the house; then give them a thorough sunning. Dusting with the chemical paraformaldehyde will keep books in closed cases from mildewing. Use sparingly, as it may be irritating to some persons. To get rid of the silverfish, spray with 5 per cent DDT oil solution around all places in the living room where they may hide during the day or crawl over when they come out at night for food. While you have the books out sunning, dust the cases thoroughly and spray inside them with the DDT solution. As an added precaution, you might sift 10 per cent DDT powder on the shelves behind the books.

Can you tell me where I can have lamp shades recovered? H. S.

Look in the yellow section of your telephone book under "lamps, made-to-order."

Can you tell me what will remove linoleum varnish from linoleum? I put some on a month ago and it has not yet dried. E. W. D.

Try turpentine, rubbing it on with "elbow grease." I must warn you that the proportion of elbow grease is very heavy.

Our upholstered furniture and mattresses have become seriously affected by mildew. We have cleaned all the exterior surfaces with a commercial preparation, but have no facilities for airing and sunning. We keep the furniture before open windows and rayed a sun lamp on all accessible surfaces, but a strong mildew odor persists. Can anything more be done to eliminate this? Will it disappear in time? R. P. O.

Mildew, once it gets well started, is difficult to handle since it is a fungus growth which attacks the fibers of the fabric itself. However, you seem to have done about all that can be done with the facilities that you have. If the odor does not abate, now that it is less humid, I would suggest that you consult an expert dry cleaner. In the meantime continue brushing or going over the surfaces with a vacuum cleaner.

Peiping Has Election, But Vote Is Thin

Peiping, Sept. 22 (U.P.).—The first municipal election in the history of this centuries-old city was held today. Rickshaw drivers, merchants and civil servants straggled to the polls in disappointingly small numbers to elect a 100-man municipal council.

American observers agreed the election fell far short of western standards of free and responsible voting, but they were keenly interested in this "kindergarten lesson in democracy" and hoped it would kindle political awareness among an apathetic citizenry.

The balloting was not secret. No booths were provided to curtain off the voters, and the large percentage of illiterates had their marking done by public scribes under the watchful eyes of official examiners.

The Kuomintang (Government Party) showed no signs of interfering in the election, although it was supervised by the Paochia, a semipolice organization representing the government's only physical contact with the people.

1947 Tobacco Season Opens Today in Va.

Danville, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—Virginia's 1947 tobacco season opens tomorrow.

Market observers predict the 11 Old Belt flue-cured auction spots will begin on a curtailed basis with prospects that this year's sales will be somewhat smaller than last year's 160,422,969 pounds.

The new selling hours, announced by the flue-cured marketing committee:

Old Belt: Three-and-a-half-hour sales day through September 26. Four-hour sales day starting September 29, increasing to a five-hour sales a day on October 13.

Middle Belt: Four-hour sales day, increasing to a five-hour sales day on October 6.

Eastern North Carolina Belt: Reduced from a five to four-hour selling day effective today.

Border Belt (North and South Carolina): Five-hour sales day through September 26. Effective September 29, markets remaining open will be curtailed 40 per cent of four-hour daily sales for each set of buyers. Under this setup, a "one-sale" market will auction 960 piles of tobacco daily; a "two-sale" market will sell 1920 piles; a "three-sale market, 2880 piles and a "four-sale" market will sell 3840 piles.

Tobacco experts predict this year's leaf will be lighter in texture, and more of the smoking type, rather than the "export" type, will be on the market, a development encouraging to growers since teh outlook for exporting any large part of the crop is not good.

The marketing committee has announced that a fee of 10 cents anacre will be collected by warehousemen on tobacco sold in Virginia by North Carolina growers.

New Residents Must File oVte Intent in Md.

New residents of Maryland who wish to vote must declare their intention of becoming citizens of Maryland at least one year before the general election.

In Prince Georges County, new residents must make the declaration at the office of Brice Bowie, clerk of the Circuit Court, in the courthouse at Upper Marlboro. They will be given certificates to present to the election judges in their voting precinct on registration days, which will be announced later. Registration will be held before the primary election. Persons who have registered in time for the general election may vote in the primary election of the party with which they have affiliated themselves.

Harry A. Shinn, deputy clerk to the County Commissioners, in the County Service Building, Hyattsville, will issue declaration of intention certificates to suburban residents.

Persons who became 21 years old while living in Maryland do not have to declare intentions. They can register on registration days.

In Montgomery County new residents may declare intentions and register at the same time between 9 and 4:30 p. m. daily at the Permanent Board of Registration office in Rockville. Special registration boards also will sit in th county buildings at Bethesda and Silver Spring the last week in October. They will not be able to vote until one year after the date on their voting cards.

10 Named in Md. To Aid Return of World War Dead

Baltimore, Sept. 22 (AP).—Second Army Military District headquarters announced today appointment of a 10-man state committee to coordinate veteran activities in connection with the return of World War 11 dead to this country.

Twenty local committees in communities throughout the state also have been selected. The state group and the organizations they represent:

Harry S. Allen, American Legion; Charles B. Buscher, eVterans of Foreign Wars; William Pritzker, Disabled American Veterans; Solomon B. Levin, Jewish War Veterans; Richard Hogan, Catholic War Veterans; Charles Gore, Military Order of the Purple Heart; E. Arthur Eby, 29th Division Association; John Geiglein, United Spanish War Veterans; Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, Maryland National Guard, and Col. John M. Lentz, Maryland Military District, Second Army. All reside in the Baltimore City area.

Payroll Tax Opposed

Roanoke, Va., Sept. 22 (AP).—Republican State Senator Ted Dalton of Radford is on record today as "strongly opposed" to a local payroll tax plan advocated by the League of Virginia Municipalities which met here last week.

In a prepared statement, the legislator declared that a payroll tax would "penalize" county residents who work in the city and would "result in a cleavage between the city and the county people."

The league suggested the plan as a means of taxing county residents who hold jobs in the city, a group which the cities charge do not pay their fair share of taxes for the operation of the cities where they

Hopkins Head Says Soviets Outdo Czars

Baltimore, Sept. 22 (AP).—Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Jomns Hopkins University and No. 1 geographical adviser to the late President Roosevelt during World War 2, said today that "Communism is absolutism designed to be more ruthless and complete than Czarism. Only the label is changed."

In an address to incoming students, Bowman denounced the Russion government and said:

" do not fear the USSR today. I only fear that our people will not act in time to give our strength the expression and the means that warn so aggressive, arbitrary, corrupt and powerful a government of the folly of starting a war.

He said a universay service law was needed "if we are to distribute military risks and responsibilities fairly and at the same time get public, including congressional, support."

"Nothing in the regimes of the czars, bad as some of then were, can show such a high degree of organization for evil, such vicious use of power, as the regime of the Soviets," said Bowman.

After the World War I, Bowman was chief territorial specialist for the American peace delegation to Paris headed by President Wilson and helped draw the new European boundary lines. At that time he was president of the American Geographical Society.

"In all direction—Bosphorus, Baltic, Artic, Far East, Persian Gulf—the U. S. S. R. is pushing out for ports and what is thought to give security to such ports, namely, the complete police control of one after the other of the smaller states that stand in the way.

"Indeed the push toward such ports is now but a detail of a larger push, the spread of Communism by every means, fair and foul, conceived by a handful of men anxious to protect themselves by imposing their evil system on the whole world."

Fall Kills Worker

Rock Hill, S. C., Sept. 22 (AP).—Frank L. Newman, 28-year-old steel worker from Stuart, Va., died at York County Hospital of injuries received when he fell today from a building under construction for the Celanese Corp. of America. Newman, an experienced steel worker, fell about 50 feet after he apparently lost his balance while making up a steel beam.

Weatherbird's Pop Paces Floor, Needs Your Help

Dave Groves, the whimsical doodler who draws the cartoons for this space, is also the creator of The Washington Post Weatherbird.

For the past few days Dave has been pacing the city room with his chin so low that he's picked up quite a few splinters.

He's trying to think up a suitable name for his Weatherbird, but he's not getting anyplace. Everything he conjures up is immediately discarded.

To restore Dave's sunny disposition, we're going to take over the job of picking a name.

We'd like you to think up a good name for the Weatherbird, and send it to: Weatherbird, The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw., Washington, D. C.

The winner will get a framed original drawing of the Weatherbird, personally autographed to him.

In case of a tie, Dave will just have to work a little harder, and make more drawings.

CORRESPONDENCE DEPT.

"Some months ago you carried an item about the American Veterans Committee conducting a book drive for hospitalized veterans. Could you give me their mailing address?

"Except for brief visits, we've been away from Washington for nine years—and you've no idea of how well posted I'm kept by The Washington Post."

Mrs. Marion B. O'Kelley, 611 Lake Shore dr., Leesburg, Fla.

A. V. C. tells me that their book drive is over for this year, but the American Red Cross is always anxious to get books. Contact your local chapter.

Sure hope you folks didn't get in the way of that hurricane down there.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

Milt Drayson of 404 Newcomb st. se., is another avid reader of the classifieds who raises an eyebrow at the way they're sometimes worded.

A local realtor recently offered a house for sale with this one:

For Sale—3-bedroom bungalow, in the heart of Takoma Park, near all conveniences. Oil heat, modern. This won't last long.

ADD SIGNS

Margaret Miller of 2115 P st. nw. has an eye for odd signs. She writes:

"In Frankie Filchock's Frozen Custard Shop at 21st and P sts. nw. there hangs one of those 'have you forgotten anything for a late snack' signs.

"Among the items you're reminded about for this late snack are bread, cake, cold drinks, and razor blades.

"A couple of weeks ago the Dumbarton Theater in Georgetown advertised: 'The Virginian in Technicolor and Double Exposure.'

"Clapp's Baby Foods put out a label that reads: 'Clapp's Breakfast Cereals for Babies Cooked and Ready to Serve.'

"And two signs in the National Gallery of Art read: 'Men Telephones' and 'Women Telephones.'"

NATCH!

Since yesterday was the first day of school, our reporters and photographers were out in force to record the event. They appear to have had a lot of fun.

For example Reporter Elsie Carper went to the Parkview School and immediately started to ask a lot of nosy questions of the kids.

Approaching Dennis Kornspan of 3306 Park pl. nw., a first grade pupil, Elsie asked:

"And what is your name, young fellow?"

"My name is Dennis," replied the student.

"And what's your last name?"

"Kornspun."

"Can you spell it?"

"Nope. That's what I'm here to learn."

QUESTION AND ANSWER

District Liner J. Hubbard found an 1894 quarter while digging in his back yard, and wonders if it's worth any more than 25 cents.

I don't know anything about numismatics, but I suspect that if he tries to buy anything with that quarter he'll find it's worth about 12½ cents.

Grin and Bear It

"I finally doped out a budget for a family of 5 on $40 a week—On this date, you'll note, we resume eating!"

Leonard Lyons

Marx Bros. to Return to Screen

NEW YORK.—Salvador Dali, who has been spending the past six months in California, returns to New York in November for a series of Dali projects: The opening of his newest exhibition, the inaugural of his cartoon strip, the completion of his opera, and the publication of his book, "50 Secrets of Magic Draftsmanship."

In the book he will include this advice to artists: "Van Gogh cut off his ears; before cutting yours off, read this book . . . Have no fear of perfection; you'll never reach it . . . Don't strive to be a modern painter; that, unfortunately, is the one thing you can't avoid being . . . Painter, you're not an orator; so don't talk—paint . . . The jealousy of unsuccessful painters will be the thermometer of your success . . . Painter, be rich rather than poor. And to this end follow my advice."

The Marx Brothers will return to the screen in a Ben Hecht story produced by Lester Cowan. Harpo and Chico will do the comedy routines, while Groucho will be the narrator.

One of the Duchess of Windsor's friends reports that if she isn't invited to the wedding of Princess Elizabeth then "the Duchess will be a stretcher-case of rage."

The General Stilwell diaries will be edited by Teddy White, coauthor of "Thunder Out of China," who will take a leave of absence from the New Republic to do this job.

Walt Disney has completed arrangeemnts to start his production of "Alice in Wonderland." He says it will be the most ambitious project he's ever tried.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke was asked about a rumor that he is about to relinquish his British citizenship to become an American. Hardwicke shook his head. "Britain has just lost India," he said. "And for Britain to lose me also would be too insufferable a loss in one year."

John Horne Burns, author of the current best-seller, "The Gallery," wrote the book in Italy in exactly 90 days. He wrote eight novels before then, but didn't try to have any of them published. Burns, who now teaches at Loomis School, has just completed another novel about a private school. He wrote it in 88 days.

Anne Nichols is coming East to see a German version of her play, "Abie's Irish Rose." It will be presented here by Felix Gerstman.

One of the sets in the new Rosalind Russell film, "The Velvet Touch," will be a reproduction of Sardi's Restaurant on W. 44th st.

Fred F. Finklehoffe, producer of "The Heiress," and Jed Harris, the director, will make two movies in Paris. They will be bilingual films, made simultaneously in English and in French.

This will be Harris' first venture into motion pictures.

At a charity dinner in Hollywood, George Jessel recited the highlights of his career with deep sentiment, and seemed to be fighting down his tears when he ended. He was followed by Eddie Cantor, who told the moist-eyed audience: "Don't take George's tears to heart, folks. He even cries at pinochle."

THE POST IS STILL GAINING IN CLASSIFIED ADS!
The Reason: RESULTS

Day after day, month after month, more classified advertisers are discovering that their ads in The Post outpull those in other papers.

While other papers are carrying few more ads than last year or not even as many as in 1946, The Washington Post continues to show large increases. In August the gains and losses in individual ads for all four papers were as follows:

POST ..... 3,952 GAIN
Paper B ..... 446 Gain
Paper C ..... 1,770 Loss
Paper D ..... 4,030 Loss

For GREATER RESULTS from your classified ads, phone The Washington Post and ask for an ad taker.
